Surrealist painter Salvador Dali dies

FIGUERAS, Spain, Jan 23, (AP): Surrealist painter Salvador Dali, whose fantastic and memorable dreamscapes were as eccentric and flamboyant as his behaviour, died today in his hometown, his doctor said. He Dali died at 10:15 am (0915 GMT) at Figueras Hospital, said Dr Charles Ponsati. He had been hospitalised since Jan 11. "The cause of death was car-

disc arrest brought on by his respiratory insufficiency and pneumonia," he told reporters. The painter had been in poor health and confined to a wheelchair since suffering severe burns in an electrical fire in his home in August 1984. He also had a history of heart trouble, and was hospitalised three times since late November. Miguel Domenech, Dali's attorney, said Dali died "softly, without making any special last statement."

Landslide buries an entire village in Soviet Central Asia

Quake kills at least 1,000 in Tajikistan

MOSCOW, Jan 23, (Reuter): An earthquake struck the Soviet Central Asian Republic of Tajikistan today, engulfing an entire village. and the official news agency Tass said at least 1,000 people had died.

"Cries and wails can be heard everywhere," Tass said. "Some are lamenting and burying their relatives and near ones, while others are trying to find the few survivors beneath the thick layer of sand and clay."

The tremor, the second serious quake in the Soviet Union in two months, sent a wall of sand and clay through villages in a mountainous district near the Afghan border in the early morning, Tass

"The number of killed was estimated at 1,000 at the close of day, but this is a preliminary figure as yet," Tass said. "Rescue work is being continued and distant mountain villages have not

Returned

Radio Moscow originally put the death toll at 1,415 people but lowered the figure in later broadcasts, without explanation.

Zaimiddin Nasredinov, head of the official Tailk news agency, said by telephone from the republic's capital, Dushanbe, that he had just returned from the area of the disaster and the scene was an "indescribable

Tass said most of the 150 homes in the village of Sharora were destroyed and its streets completely buried after the quake, which measured seven points on the 12-point Soviet Mercalli scale at its epicentre 50 km (30 miles) southwest of Hairrulo Yuldashev, chairman of the local co-operative in the nearby village of Okuli-Olu, told Tass all 70 or so homes there had been reduced to rubble.

Tass said scores of kilometres of power lines had been destroyed and many bridges damaged. Thousands of cattle were killed and thousands of hectares of fertile ploughland covered in a thick layer of sand and clay.

It was the second big earth-quake to hit the Soviet Union in two months. On Dec 7, a quake devastated an 80-km (50-mile) diameter region of Armenia, flattening towns and villages and killing at least 25,000 people.

A Tajik Deputy Prime Minister, Georgy Koshlakov, said the quake had caused a burst of mud from the foothills which was up to eight km (five miles) wide and 2.5 km (1.5 miles) long.

Nasredinov said about a billion cubic metres of mud had poured over Sharora and in some places was more than 15 metres (50 feet) deep.

Controversy

He said people from nearby villages, equipped with picks and spades, had joined the rescue work. "We have a tradition of helping one another," he said, adding that no military personnel had so far been sent to the disaster region.

According to Tass, traditional clay houses in Tajikistan suffered particular damage in today's earthquake, which struck at 5.02 am (2302 GMT Sunday).

Tass said many other towns and villages in the republic had felt the quake less strongly. Among them was the town of Nurek, the site of a giant hydroelectric dam.

Fass did not say whether the dam had been damaged. There was considerable controversy over its construction, a pet project of the late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev in the 1960s.

Tajikistan lies in the middle of a seismically active zone and many buildings are specially designed to withstand earth tremors. Similar techniques proved inadequate in Armenia. where modern buildings suffered the worst damage.

In 1985, an earthquake in the Tajik city of Kairakkum caused severe damage and many casual-

Tass said Soviet scientists had warned of the possibility of another serious tremor in Armenia, following the telltale signs of a recent decrease in underground shocks and a change in the ground water level.

Court orders restoration of Baluchistan assembly

QUETTA, Pakistan, Jan 23. (Reuter): A court today ordered restoration of the Baluchistan provincial assembly, dissolved suddenly last month amid charges that Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto had conspired to keep an ally in power. At the end of hearings which started on Thursday, four judges of the Baluchistan High Court agreed unanimously to restore the legislature of Pakistan's largest but least populated province, bordering Iran and Afghanistan.

Baluchistan's advocate general filed an application to susp-end the order and leave to appeal to the Supreme Court.

Unconstitutional

The province has been governed by a caretaker chief minister since Dec 22, a week after Chief Minister Zafarullah Khan Jamali dissolved the legislature on the advice of Governor Mohammad Musa. The governor was bound to follow the chief minister's advice.

The court ruled the dissolution unconstitutional and without lawful authority. The case was brought against the government by four assembly members and a Baluchistan lawyer. Last month Benazir, 35, said the action was constitutional and her Pakistan People's Party would not interfere. Political analysts said the dissolution saved Jamali, whose coalition included Benazir's party, from losing a vote of confidence. Benazir, whose PPP won a general election on Nov 16, rejected opposition accusations that she conspired to keep an ally in power.

Justice Kudha Baksh Marri was sworn in as acting chief minister on Dec 22 and a caretaker cabinet appointed to prepare for elections within 90 days of the dissolution.

Iraq releases 131 Iranian POWs in a peace gesture

BAGHDAD, Jan 23, (AP): Iraq repatriated 131 disabled and ailing Iranian prisoners of war in a "humanitarian and peace gesture" by President Saddam Hussein, the first Gulf war prisoners to be freed in two months.

Their arrival in Tehran was noted in a brief report by the official Islamic Republic News Agency.

There was no immediate sign that Tehran will reciprocate and resume prisoner exchanges halt-ed on Nov 27 amid deadlocked peace talks aimed at ending the eight-year-old Gulf war.

But United Nations officials and diplomats have said that while they see little prospect of a breakthrough in the stalled peace negotiations, progress was possible in resuming prisoner exchan-

Iraq said it will free another 124 Iranians tomorrow. Deadlock

Today's operation took place as the United Nations' chief mediator in the peace talks, Jan Eliasson, was expected to arrive in Tehran for talks with Iranian leaders aimed at breaking the deadlock in negotiations.

Eliasson, Sweden's ambassador to the United Nations, was scheduled to visit Baghdad later. Iran and Iraq halted a Red Cross-sponsored exchange of 1,158 disabled and ailing POWs in November because of a dispute over the number of prisoners to be repairiated.

International Red Cross officials supervised today's repatriation operation, in which the prisoners were flown to Tehran in an airliner chartered by the Swiss agency.

The Iranians were taken to Baghdad airport in four Army buses and ambulances from a military hospital in the capital, where they spent the night and underwent medical checks.

Andries Qun, the head of the Red Cross mission in Baghdad, told reporters at the airport that Red Cross officials had also examined and interviewed the prisoners.

Arafat makes first ever visit to Oman

MANAMA, Jan 23, (Agencies): PLO chairman Yasser Arafat capital from Baghdad where he began talks today with Omani called on Arab heads of state to leaders in his first visit to the sultanate.

The talks focused on PLO's plans for boosting the Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occ-cupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, said state-run Muscat Radio.

Concessions

Oman was among the first nations to recognize the independent Palestinian state proclaimed by the Palestine National Council, the PLO's parliament in exile, in Algiers in November.

Arafat arrived in the Omani support the Palestinian uprising, now entering its 14th month.

In Beirut, radical PLO official George Habash was quoted by the As Safir newspaper as sharply criticising Arafat for making free concessions" to Israel. He also predicted that US-Palestinian dialogue would fail. But Habash, a member of the

PLO's executive committee, said the popular uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories and the declaration of a Palestinian state has united Palestinians, despite continued difference over

Uprising will be intensified

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM. Jan 23, (AP): Underground Palestinian leaders said in a new leaflet circulated today that they would escalate their rebellion despite the Army's tough new measures to quell the 13-month

The united national leadership of the uprising also rejected a peace proposal put forward by Defence Minister Yitzhak Rabin that calls for elections in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, followed by limited autonomy and peace talks. In the West Bank's largest city of Nablus, assailants threw several firebombs at an Israeliowned bank, injuring several Arab employees, the Army said. Arab news reports said four Palestinians were treated for burns or smoke inhalation.

Israeli* newspapers reported, meanwhile, that new rules allowing soldiers to shoot plastic and rubber bullets more freely at Palestinian protesters has sparked controversy and confusion in the Army.

Some senior officers have voiced concern in closed-door forums that the measures could escalate tensions in rebellion, the mass-circulation Maariv daily reported.

The French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said yesterday the PLO had recognised Israel's right to exist unequivocally and Israelis and Palestinians should now open peace talks.

after poll defeat Rajiv moves to limit damage

MADRAS, Jan 23, (Agencies): Backed into a corner by a crushing state election defeat. Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi fought back campaign jibes of official corruption by swift disciplinary moves against key members of his party. "It is the worst political situation the prime minister has been in since coming to power in 1984," one political analyst said after Tamil Nadu voters overwhelmingly rejected the Congress (I) Party despite his hectic. personal campaign.

Violence

"He must now use the rest of the year to repair the damage to his own and his party's reputation." C.T. Kurien of the Madras Institute of Development Studies said today.

Opponents said the humiliating weekend result left Rajiv facing problems on his Sri Lankan policy and a possible revolt by party leaders fearing defeat in a general election which must be held this year.

Congress (I) Party was locked in close battles for two other states, early official returns showed today.

With results declared in 32 of 59 contests for the 60-member Nagaland assembly in northeastern India, the Congress (1) Party won 16 and its main rival, the Naga People's Conference, captured 16, state-run television said. Violence forced the postponement of one race.

In the nearby state of Mizoram, Rajiv's party won 10 of the 40 assembly seats, and the Mizo National Front, a former separatist guerrilla group that governed for seven months in 1987, took six, the television said.

Stake

Ballot-counting for Saturday's elections began in the two states this morning, and final results were expected early tomorrow.
The landslide against the party in Tamil Nadu — worse than anyone contemplated — abruptly ended all talk of a general election earlier than December. Congress won only 25 seats out of the 232 at stake in Tamil Nadu to finish a poor third of four main contesting parties. Kurien said the crisis was even worse than two years ago when the opposition accused Rajiv's government of involvement in a series of corruption scandals. "He will now have to go the full term and not think of early elections because he needs the time to recoup his losses," said

Kurien, an economic adviser to the government. Congress crashed to defeat at the hands of the regional party, Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam (DMK), despite a hectic election campaign undertaken by Rajiv.

With 170 seats — a more than two-thirds majority - at its command, the DMK and its allies will be able to amend the Tamil Nadu state's constitution. "It is a defeat for the prime minister," said DMK chief Muthuvel Karunanidhi, whose party has joined the national front electoral alliance with six

other parties in a bid to topple

One of the front's most prominent leaders, Vishwanath Pratap Singh, said Rajiv would now face a rebellion within Congress from leaders fearing defeat in general elections.

The prime minister is always seen by his party members not just as their biggest votegetter, but also one who is able to swing an election with his own charisma," said Singh who emerged as a major opposition leader by spearheading a campaign for clean government.

Questioned

I hat ability is being seriously questioned after (by-election) defeats in the north and yesterday's loss in the south within a 12-month period," Singh said.

Rajiv moved swiftly to limit the damage to his own and his party's image by ordering key lieutenant Arjun Singh to resign as Madhya Pradesh state chief minister immediately after a court ordered an inquiry into the running of a lottery associated with members of Singh's family. The move was aimed at signalling Rajiv's intention to root out government corruption, an issue widely used by National Front leaders in their Tamil Nadu campaign, said political analyst Cho Ramaswamy.

Rajiv also gave warning of stern measures to put down dissenters by forcing the resignations of Bihar Governor Govind Narain Singh and state assembly Speaker Shiv Chandra Jha, said

Ramaswamy. Dispute

Singh and Jha had been locked in a dispute with Bihar Chief Minister Bhagwat Jha Azad over their constitutional powers. On Sri Lanka, Rajiv could be embarrassed by DMK leader Karunanidhi's open support for the hardline Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam chief Vellupillai Prabhakaran.

Karunanidhi said his new government would review India's stand on the ethnic conflict between Sri Lanka's minority Tamils and majority Sin-

Iran and Syria open talks to end fighting between rival Shiites

DAMASCUS, Jan 23, (Reuter): Iran and Syria began talks today aimed at ending three weeks of heavy fighting between the rival Shiite Muslim militias which they support in Lebanon.

Officials said Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati attended a meeting at the Damascus Foreign Ministry with his Syrian counterpart Farouq Al Shara and Nabih Berri, leader of one of the feuding militias, Amal.

Diplomats said that depending on progress at the talks leaders of Amal could meet later with representatives of the rival

NEW YORK, Jan 23, (AP): George Bush advised President Reagan at White House meetings in December 1985 and in the spring of 1986 to end US arms hipments to Iran, according to a published report quoting Reagan's former national security adviser.

Robert McFarlane, was quoted in today's editions of the New York Times as saying that although then-Vice President Bush rarely expressed an opinion at such meetings, he supported McFarlane in urging that the arms shipments be stopped.

"I was struck that he had intervened," McFarlane told the Times. "That seemed a little bit unusual to me, and I was pleased

Industrial unrest

RABAT, Jan 23, (Reuter): Industrial unrest which has swept Morocco in recent weeks highlights frustrations among workers built up over five years of austerity and is stirring government anxiety.

Human rights and union groups said today three miners had been jailed for their role in the most bitter of the industrial disputes - a pit strike in northeast Morocco.

Two miners were jailed for two months and a third for three months for handing out leaflets during a sit-in at the Jerrada coalfield, where work was suspended three weeks ago and all 7,000 workers laid off.

Defence spending

TOKYO, Jan 23, (Reuter): Japan plans to spend more both defending itself and helping out the Third World in the coming year, government officials said today.

The government's draft budget calls for it to shell out 3.92 trillion yen ($31 billion) on defence and 756 billion yen ($5.9) billion) on economic assistance in the year beginning April 1.

Fighting was continuing at the barracks several hours after the assault began.

The attack started when an undetermined number of gunmen pulled up in a lorry and six cars at about 7:00 am (0900 GMT), the Army sources and local resident said.

Encircled

Army helicopters clattered overhead and the barracks was encircled by police and troops, they said. Local residents said they had heard a number of explosions, possibly of grenades, when the fighting broke out. Pamphlets scattered by the group identified it as part of the 'new Argentine army" and said it supported the leaders of Argentina's three failed Army rebellions over the past two years, according to local news agencies. They said the pamphlets stated that the group was formed to "combat Marxist subversion within the government" and "against the radical campaign to destroy the Army." President Raul Alfonsin's

Many Western diplomats fear Afghanistan may collapse into chaos and bloody internecine fighting if the feuding rebel groups do not agree on a transitional government for a post-Soviet Afghanistan.

"If they don't get their act together, and fast, we may not see an end to the war," said a Western diplomat in Islamabad. Four of the eight rebel groups based in Iran announced over the weekend they would boycott the council meeting, to be held near Peshawar, Pakistan, because they weren't allotted enough representatives. Refugees

The Pakistan-based alliance, called the Islamic Unity of Afghan Mujahedeen, laboured over the weekend to choose 420 representatives from their ranks 60 from each of the seven groups in the alliance. The Iran-based rebel groups were allocated 60 seats, but they have demanded 120. "They are not satisfied but I think we can compromise," said Saeed. "We are all mujahedeen." Shiite Muslims make up about 17 per cent of Afghanistan's population and about 40 per cent of the Afghan refugees who have fled since a communist govern-ment seized power in a 1978 military coup.

Afghans, one-third now live outside Afghanistan — three million in Pakistan and two million in

One-half of the representatives of the rebels' consultative council are supposed to be mujahedeen commanders fighting in Afghanistan and the rest are to be well-known intellectuals, tribal leaders and "good Muslims," rebel spokesmen have

Rebel leaders have refused to allow members of the current Kabul government, whom they view as traitors, to participate in discussions on forming a transitional government and choosing a temporary head of state.

The rebels are calling for a transitional government to over-see election of a 350-member parliament in three months of parliament in title months of balloting among Afghan refugees in Pakistan and Iran, as well as Afghans living in rebel-controlled parts of Afghanistan.

Constitution

The rebels also said a parliament, in turn, could approve a new constitution and oversee a general election within the next 12 months to produce a permanent, post-war Afghan government

The Soviets are to complete their nine-month military withdrawal from Afghanistan by Feb 15 under the terms of the accord signed last year. Some Western diplomats believe the Kabul regime would fall quickly without the Red Army and with the mainly conscripted Afghan Army left to face the rebels alone.

But others predict a huge stockpile of Soviet arms and ammunition left behind would enable the communists to hold onto major Afghan cities for weeks or even months.

Shortage Soviet military officials today blamed food shortages in the capital on inefficiency by the Afghan government and hoarding by traders as Moscow stepped up its emergency airlift of

The local authorities did not give out the orders in time for when they needed to get food supplies," said Maj. Gen. Lev Serebrov, a member of the Soviet military command in Kabul.

"And some of the traders are not selling in order to raise prices. There are enough suplies in the city and they are keeping it to themselves," he contended.

As Serebrov spoke, Soviet troops loaded hundreds of sacks of flour onto trucks from the rear of giant Ilyushin 76 transport planes that landed and took off regularly from the airport.

Campaigner against kidney trade threatened

ANKARA, Jan 23, (Reuter): A Turk campaigning to end what he calls a growing trade in kidneys and other human organs said today he had received threatening telephone calls.

Mustafa Dursun Ozsaglam said he received the threats after appearing on Turkish Television following British press reports that a London hospital paid Turks £2,000 ($3,500) for kidneys to be used a transplants.

"The callers told me I had gone too far and said 'keep silent or you will be dealî with'," Ozsaglam, chairman of the privately-run Association of Organ Transplant Patients, told Reuters.

He said he received three calls in Turkish last night after the state-run television programme was aired.

The private Humana Wellington Hospital in London has denied the press reports and said it did not pay money for kidneys.

Ozsaglam, himself a kidney transplant recipient, said in the interview that authorities should investigate a trade in live organs which he said was widespread in Turkey.
The people who make money out of acting as intermediaries between patients and poor people willing to sell their organs for cash can only be described as monsters," he said.

A 1986 Turkish law bans the sale of live organs.

And in another development, the alleged leader of a revolutionary group Mahmoud Noureddin Suliman, accused of killing Israeli diplomats, yesterday marked his 49th birthday in detention.

The shooting incident grew out of internal bickering in the association. Some members, rebels against the authority of the union's elected ruling council, have occupied the building since last Thursday.

Ahmed El Khawaga, the council chairman, and Mohammed Sabry, the secretary-general, told the Associated Press the dissenters used automatic weapons in the episode. El

Egyptian bar office sealed off Khawaga said the rebel lawyers' leader claimed also to have explosives inside.

The two lawyers said they had no information on the passerby who was wounded. Other sources said the casualty, a man, was hit by a bullet in the shoulder.

Telephone calls to the building went unanswered. Police officers outside refused to discuss what was happening, and one told a reporter to stop asking about it.

Shooting

Riot police and plainclothes security men ringed the building, a two-storey villa at the intersection of two main streets in the capital's busy shopping area, immediately after the shooting. Vehicles were diverted from the street where the entrance to the building is located.

At least eight police trucks, with a total capacity of about 400 men, were seen parked on nearby streets. The Swiss embassy and the nation's principal court com-plex are located a block away.

The Interior Ministry's two top spokesmen, both police generals, were not available for comment. Colonels in their offices said they had no information. The ministry is responsible for domestic security.

Association chairman El Khawaga said by telephone from his home that he was threatened with assassination if he went ahead with a published plan to hold a news conference this after-noon at the association headquarters. El Khawaga said Ahmed Nas-ser, dissident leader and a known leftist, conveyed the threat in a phone call this morning.

"Ahmed Nasser phoned to tell me that if I went to the association for a news conference as planned. 'I will kill you,'" El Khawaga said.

Ten years for sexual assault

A MAN was sentenced to ten years rigorous imprisonment by the Criminal Court for sexually assaulting a woman. The court also sentenced two of his friends to seven years in jail for helping him in his crime.

The court was told that the victim was visiting a friend on the day of the incident.

The first defendant broke into the house, demanding to see the identities of everybody there, claiming that he was a CID man. The owner of the house told him that one of the women in the house was his wife and the other her friend.

The defendant left the house and returned with an un-known person (who was not arrested as his identity is still unknown). The unknown showed the house owners a red card and claimed that he too was from the CID. He told the owner of the house and his wife to follow him into another room and the defendant was thereby left alone with the victim.

The house owner testified that he saw two men standing in the yard, guarding the house. The woman claimed that the defendant tied her up and sexually assaulted her as did the unknown person. The owner of the house recognised the defendant and his two friends among several persons at the police station.

The court announced that evidence was clear against the defendants and the sentence was upheld by the Court of Appeal and the Court of Cassation.

Kuwait to establish External Information Department: Jaber

KUWAIT, Jan 23, (KUNA): Information Minister Sheikh Jaber Mubarak Al Hamad Al Sabah said his ministry would establish an External Information Department the purpose of which would be to communicate information to the international

tion is an effective weapon in international relations and the new department is intended to maintain the special international status Kuwait occupies under the wise political leader-ship of HH the Amir and HH the Crown Prince.
Strategy

"Our concept to promote external information is based on laying down a strategy to carry out the directives of the political leadership and to incarnate those policies through scientific and developed means," the minister

The official added that there is a plan to establish information offices at Kuwait's embassies world-wide and to provide them with leaslets, posters and audiovisual means to reflect the country's experience and activities featuring all aspects of living.

Responding to a question on the continuity of press censor-ship, Sheikh Jaber said: "The task of the controller these days is just a formality because the majority of those who work in local press are fully aware of what to omit."

He said that the political leadership is keen to ensure the

Rashed leaves for OiC culture conference

KUWAIT, Jan 23, (KUNA): Minister of State for Cabinet Affairs and Chairman of the National Council for Culture, Arts and Letters Rashed Abdul Aziz Al Rashed left here today for Dakar to attend the Conference of the Ministers of Culture for the Organisation of Islamic Conference (OIC) due to be held there January 25-26.

On departure Rashed said that he was going to deliver Kuwait's speech at the inaugural session of the conference.

The conferees are scheduled to discuss the report worked out by ranking officials in preparation to the meetings and will get acquainted with the report of the OIC secretariat on the activities of the Islamic cultural establishments and universities and the obstacles facing the cultural sector and ways of overcoming them. The conferees are also expected to discuss a cultural strategy for the Islamic world, Rashed said, adding that during his visit to Dakar he will meet with Senegalese officials and ministers who will attend the conference.

5 years for misbehaving in prison.

KUWAIT'S Criminal Court sentenced four women already serving jail terms to an additional five years in jail.

The court was told that two of the convicts physically attacked another inmate, for having testified against them to substantiate a statement given by the jail warden earlier accusing the four of disobeying prison rules and regulations.

The other two accused ensured that none of the other inmates rushed to the rescue of the victim.

Fog disrupts Abu Dhabi flights

ABU DHABI, Jan 23, (Reuter): Six flights to Abu Dhabi were diverted to other airports in the region early today due to thick fog over the Gulf, an airport official said.

Asked on his contribution to the process of the Kuwaiti press, Sheikh Jaber replied humbly "I think I managed to contribute to the promotion and creativity of the press during my brief ten-ure." "But these things need ample time before arriving at a judgement," he added. Replying to a question on his meeting with foreign correspon-dents, the minister said that it was meant to acquaint them with the country's national policy to enable them to have a clear vision and facilitate their work here.

Barre leaves Kuwait after three-day visit

KUWAIT, Jan 23, (Agencies): Somali President Mohammed Siad Barre and the accompanying delegation left here today after a three day official visit.

The Somali leader was seen off at the airport by HH the Amir, HH the Crown Prince and Prime Minister, Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister, Minister of the Amiri Diwan and other ministers and senior state officials.

Somalia's Information Minister Dr Abdel Rashid Ahmed denied Western reports of massive abuses of human rights in his country, including the use of chemical weapons against rebels in the north.

In a meeting with press reporters here today Ahmed said "there are some foreign papers and radios like the BBC (British Broadcasting Corporation) which claim that Somalia violated laws of human rights and obtained chemical weapons from Libya to strike at some elements in Somalia.

"These lies have no basis in truth, but aim at distorting world public opinion," Ahmed said. International human rights organisations have accused

Somalia of torturing and executing large numbers of opponents nd ofter a Ahmed, speaking at the end of a three-day visit to Kuwait by Somali President Mohamed Siad Barre said talks with HH the Amir focused on economic and political reforms in Somalia. The government party has promised an amnesty to northerners imprisoned after last year's fighting and moved to open up the economy to more private investment. It has also launched a diplomatic campaign to counter human rights charges. Ahmed said Siad Barre, on the final leg of an Arab tour which also included Iraq and Egypt, had discussed Kuwaiti investment opportunities in Somalia. Kuwait, one of the Arab world's richest states, is already a leading aid donor to Somalia, one of the poorest.

"We welcome Kuwaiti investments and have opened the way for all Arab investments and we offer big guarantees to preserve them. We also welcome foreign (non-Arab) investment in our country in tourism and trade." Ahmed said

He said rebels had obstructed efforts to improve relations bet-ween Somalia and Ethiopia. The two neighbours have restored diplomatic ties, withdrawn forces from the border and agreed to stop supporting each other's rebels, but relations remain

"We could have reached ween Somalia and Ethiopia to normalise relations but some Somali rebels carried out an attack on northern Somalia and caused casualties and damages," Ahmed said.

French team finds ancient statue

BAGHDAD, Jan 23, (AP: French archaeologists have unearthed a statue and fragments of an ancient grave marker in Larsa, southern Iraq, dating back to the Babylonian era of 626-539 BC, the government-run 'Baghdad Observer' daily reported today. The statue of a worshipper could be the most important finding in the site, where French archaeologists have been digging since the early 1930s, the Englishlanguage newspaper said.

Ancient

The statue could shed light on the religious life of the ancient city and the Babylonians' religious rituals, the paper quoted Daniel Forest, leader of the French team, as saying.

Larsa, about 200 miles (300 kilometres) south of Baghdad, was one of the major cities of Mesopotamia, the ancient name for Iraq which means "land between the rivers," the Euphrates and the Tigris.
It was also a key religious site where the sun god Utu was worshipped.

The 'Bagndad Observer' said

the French group has made many significant finds in Iraq's ancient towns since it began excavations in the Larsa region. Forest said the statue was par-tly damaged, but will be of great value to archaeologists studying Mesopotamian art and history. It shows a man, naked to the waist, praying in the traditional Mesopotamian manner, with his hands clasped to his chest, similar to the Muslim practice. Unusual

Forest said the grave marker, or Stela, made out of dark gray stone, had apparently been used as a door stopper in a building.

It was unusual because the people who lived in the region inthe Babylonian period did not use stone for gravestones, Forest noted.

Losses decrease as APC opens more outlets

THE Agricultural Products Company has succeeded in reducing losses, according to Khaled Al Othman, Managing Director of the Company.

In 1987 the losses totalled KD888,000 but was reduced to KD90,000 by the end of 1988. He said that one of the main reasons of the reduction was the increase in the number of branches distributing local agricultural products. There were 25 branches in 1987 which were increased to 37 last year. The company was also involved in a number of state tenders which aided sales. The opening of the vegetable market in Sulaibikhat also helped in the marketing of products, he added. Positive results have encouraged the company to open three new markets at the end of this month; one near Hawalli Passports Office, one at the Ministries Complex and a third near Sabahiya Garden. The official added that the company exported 117 tonnes of locally grown vegetables, mainly tomatoes and cucumbers, to Saudi Arabia. Bahrain and Qatar last year. This, he said, was considered a good start to the export of Kuwaiti agricultural products.

Othman said that the company subsidises Kuwaiti farmers in Wafra and Abdalli by providing plastic covers for their farms. irrigation pipes, seeds, fertilisers, insecticides and cartons for packing products at symbolic prices. The company also buys products from the farmers at attractive prices to encourage

1.300 Indian construction workers strike in Al Qurain

By Fathima Ahmed

"PAY US our back salary or send us home" say over 1,300 Indian construction workers, employed by two sub-contrac-tors at a housing project in Kuwait's Al Qurain suburb.

The workers went on strike four days ago to ask for back pay, which was promised by their employers in December when they had stopped work en masse.
"Only if we don't work, they listen to us and promise to pay us, agreeing to everything we have to say. The moment we go back to work, they revert to their oppressive practices," said one worker. Nine hundred labourers from the same companies went on strike in December, and stopped work for a week. They agreed to 'return to work" after assurances from the employers and Indian embassy officials that their dues would be paid. Sub-contract

The labourers were recruited from India in September last year by an Indian, who took the subcontract for building homes in Al Qurain, and sub-contracted the work to two other contractors, both Indian. They arrived in Kuwaita month later. Since their employment, they claim, they have been paid a total average of KD70.

Their wages range from KD60 to KD80, depending on their job on site, as stated in the agreements, written in English, and signed by both the employer and the employee. The cost of free food and accommodation. Their employers have also been deducting a part of Rs. 20,000 which was spent by them to bring the labourers to Kuwait. Of the total employees, they claim, only 50 to 70 have been provided with identity cards.

Recently, five labourers went to Kuwait City and were arrested for not carrying IDs. No one from the company went to visit them. The police were sympathetic and brought the workers to the company for identification," said the workers.

"Instead of showing sympathy, our sponsors chide us for going to town without IDs," said

No facilities

"There is no water in our camps no emergency aid facility; no transport to take injured or ill workers to hospital," they claim. They said one of the labourers recently died because he did not receive proper medical care in

Gekic — a pianist on the move

By Jadranka Porter

INTERNATIONAL music competitions are events which can either make or break a career of a budding musician. Although he won several international piano competitions in early 1980s, a prominent Yugoslav pianist Kemal Gekic was truly initiated into the international music circuit at the Frederic Chopin Competition in Warsaw, Poland in

Not that he won the contest. He wasn't even among the top six contenders. But talent, a critic's pen and audience enthusiasm triumphed over the jury's decision. Gekic, 26, walked out of the competition with no medals, merely a Diplome d'honneur. But he was by no means a loser. Audiences clamoured for him. critics sang his praises and engagements began pouring in. He has given successful con-certs and has recorded in Italy, West Germany, Denmark. stage. There were three cats there too, playing with curtain tussles. As if that was not enough halfway through the casual approach to music but Gekic claims that experiences like this make his career interesting.

He draws satisfaction from playing music, being famous and rubbing shoulders with even more famous than he is. But he is quick to point out that there is the other side of the coin - tremendous physical and psychological pressure. "You sure have to make a big effort to play 34 notes in one second,"

Constantly on the move he has little opportunity to live what is known as normal life.
"If a man feels well in China,
Spain, Egypt, Canada or Warsaw, it means he doesn't particularly care where he is," he says with a note of regret.

Gekic, who graduated from Academy of Arts in Novi Sad, Yugoslavia, where he now teaches, has two clear cut ambitions — to perfect his playing and to spend time composing piano music. In the latter he has already taken a bold step of performing his own arrangement of a piece of music by Liszt. This met with flattering reviews in France - a hopeful sign since it was the press which played a part in the success of Gekic the pianist.

THE founding fathers of rockabilly, the hybrid of rhythm and blues and country music, the Sun Rhythm Section, are currently visiting Kuwait.

Rockabilly music took America by storm in the mid-1950s and is associated with one record label: the yellow and outlet for Memphis blues talent. By 1954, Sam's discovery of a young truck driver named Elvis Presley shifted the firm's emphasis toward the new company's roster boasted names like Carl Perkins, Johnny Cash, Jerry Lee Lewis and Roy Orbison.

BEWARE of all enterprises that require new clothes — Henry David Thoreau, US writer (1817-1862).

A revolution has begun in Hungary

By Eric Bourne

VIENNA: Back in the early '50s the Tito regime in Yugoslavia abandoned a lengthy effort to dragoon millions of peasants into Soviet-style collectivization.

Tito said that members might leave the collectives and, still more remarkably, that they could take with them the land, stock, and tools each had taken into the farms when - under fierce pressures — they signed up as members. (Previously, those assets were forefeit if they quit.)

The decree was to take effect in six months. But peasants voted with their feet, and, long before that time was reached, Tito's collectives bad collapsed.

A similar revolution is beginning in Hungary. There events themselves - a mushrooming of political groups and embryo par-ties — are overtaking even the most ardent advocates of political pluralism within the Communist Party.

It all happened in the half year since the party's conference elected a new, younger leadership committed to reform far beyond anything envisaged by the pioneering "new economic mechanism" 20 years before. Challenge

Union of Young Democrats, an Alliance of Free Democrats, democratic "fronts" of prewar and wartime vintage, several independent trade unions, and a glasnost-style Openness Club for journalists have all sprung into being. .

The most challenging move came in mid-November when a handful of veteran party members met with young sympathizers to revive the Smallholders' Party. It was the strongest party in Hungary immediately following the war.

In 1945 elections, in fact, the party took 57 per cent of the vote against a modest 17 per cent each for the communist and socialist parties. The President and prime minister were both Smallholders, and the party was the biggest obstacle to the Sovietization of Hungary.

It was not long, before the Communist leader Matyas Rakosi - backed, of course by the Soviets — began the notorious "salami tactics" which, slice by slice, subverted the ruling co tion from within to seize total power in 1948.

Hungary is now undertaking big political reforms as well as deep economic change. But the party leadership has obviously been surprised by how quickly a host of varied groups has grasped at the new opportunities.

and unofficial associations to form parties and interest groups. A second law this year and a new constitution to be readied for 1990, will formally concede the principle of multiparty politics,

Not everyone in the Politburo welcomes the prospect. Party leader Karoly Grosz has suggested that if these new groups are able to field candidates at the next parliamentary elections, the Communist Party would find itself in a minority in the next National Assembly.

There is strong disagreement just how far these organizations can be allowed to go. Only the Smallholders, who claim they never legally lost their existence now calls themselves a party. Others seek registration as "a social organization with political aims." But the challenge is implicit enough.

Some have roused concern, even among the most wholehearted reformers, that they can take things too far, too fast. Some groups, for example, have listed neutrality and withdrawal from the Warsaw Pact among their aims. This was the decisive element in Imre Nagy's 1956 platform that clinched Khrushchev's resolve to crush the uprising.

Twelve years later in Czechoslovakia and again in Poland in 1981 radicalism contributed much to reformers' defeat. Today, the danger is not the pos-sibility of Soviet intervention, but that even a reform-minded party will find it necessary to apply the breaks.

From the moment, Hungary is voyaging in new waters on its own. Gorbachev's truly momentous constitutional reforms may broaden electoral choice, but the Soviet leader is not thinking of new parties.

Hungary counts - Poland a reform ally. But the leadership there is hardly contemplating a multiparty system, let alone enacting legislation in that direction. Polish Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski said recently that "politically, the party's monopoly is over" and that the 1989 elections will bring "independent opposition circles" into parliament.

The operative word is "circles" not parties. The Polish party, Rakowski says, is not going to "relinquish power."

Among Hungary's leaders there is still sharp disagreement about a multiparty system. But it is being openly argued. A dissident political scientist expelled from the party as an overzealous reformer in the last days of the Kadar regime aptly summed it up as a time of "fertile confusion."

Glasnost is generating refugee flow

US struggling to handle the abundance of its success

By E.A. Wayne

WASHINGTON: Mikhail Gorbachev's glasnost (openness) is generating a refugee overflow for the United States. The US is struggling to handle the abundance of its success.

"We've been demanding all along that the Soviet government let their people go, and now Gorbachev is saying 'go ahead and help yourself.' 's says Court Robinson of the nonprofit US Committee for Refugees.

In 1986, 913 Jews left the Soviet Union via Vienna. As of Dec 4, about 15,540 had arrived in Vienna last year. An estimated 13,670 were seeking to come to the US. As of Oct 1, more than 9.000 had emigrated last year.

Sources in and out of govern-ment say the number of Soviets asking to come to the US could easily double the 24,500 refugee entry spaces currently approved for all Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union for this fiscal year.

The surging numbers are overwhelming the US refugee programme and have sparked a review of US policy.

"Current policy is put together with paper clips and rubber bands," says a former official who specialised in these quesimmediate needs, the administration is beginning to use a special "parole" authority of the attorney general to offer entrance to some of the several thousand Soviet Jews and Armenians in the current backlog. These applicants could well otherwise have to wait many months for admission to the US and some might not qualify as "refugees" under US law. Success

However, this approach worries US groups supporting Jewish emigration. The soaring numbers are "a US foreign policy success," says Phillip Saperia, assistant executive vicepresident of the Hebrew Immigration Aid Society (HIAS), but the US response should be an extraordinary embarrassment. This outflow is something we've wished for, prayed for, and demanded for Saperia and others worry that US hesitancy to accept Soviet emigrants could be interpreted by Moscow and other communist governments as a sign that they don't need to keep the exit doors open.

Unlike refugee admission, the parole process does not ensure easy means to become a citizen. A parolee needs a sponsor to pay his way and guarantee a job.

US officials and legislators say they recognise these problems, but are struggling with tighter budgets and the need to have available money and space for those in dire need around the world. "This is quite a dilemma for the politicians," says an informed Senate aide. "They want to respect what groups in the US are saying - that everyone who leaves is a bona fide refugee - but that is not true of any country, including the Top US officials are consulting with Congress on meeting the short-term crunch and finding a longer-term solution. One proposal for the longer term, which sources say may take legislative form soon, is to create a new legal category for entering the US. This category would fall in between that of refugees who must demonstrate a "wellfounded fear of prosecution" and immigrants, who in most cases must have special ties to the US, or desired skills.

remaining $6,000 can be funded once the refugees get to the US, but private money will be needed to get them here.

Even going this far worried top officials, including former Secretary of State George Shultz. Now the needs are multiplied.

In the case of the Soviet Union, the administration last year sought emergency approval of 15,000 additional admissions to meet the sharp increase of Soviet Jewish and Armenian emigrants. Congress approved the additional numbers, but not all the funding. The gap was met by cutting services and borrowing from other funds, but officials came away convinced that wouldn't work again.

Hardship

Of the 24,500 refugee slots for the Eastern bloc, only about 16,000 are allocated to the Soviet Union. Private specialists say the backlog from the USSR alone could reach 30,000 by the end of the fiscal year in September. US officials are talking about a 25,000-person surplus, based on current flows.

Given the surging numbers, it's not surprising that the processing machinery in Moscow and Rome is falling behind. At the end of October the backlog in Moscow was about 6,000. according to informed officials. The wait causes hardship. Most of those applying have already cut many of their ties, sold their homes, and left their jobs. They are now faced with the prospect of waiting months, and many don't understand why, officials

Who is a refugee? The US has been bending the 1980 refuget law for Soviet emigrants. "It's an open secret that refugees from the Soviet Union did not go through the rigorous questioning to see if they were really persecuted as required by law," says a congressional specialist, "But now INS (the Immigration and Naturalization Service) has started to pose those questions."

In 1987, key congressmen also started to ask the administration about reports of questionable applications, and how fear of ersecution was justified if some of the new refugees, particularly Armenians, kept their Soviet passports and could visit back and forth. They and many inside the administration worried that unless the law were rigorously applied, the US system would become inequitable or get out of control. Armenian groups in the US

seem comfortable with a screening process, say specialists in and out of government. But Jewish groups are not. For them, being a Jew automatically qualifies one as a refugee, given the long history of persecution in Czarist Russia and Soviet Union.

HIAS's Saperia legitimate refugees are now being denied entrance. He says 171 Soviet Union Jews have been denied refugee status since mid-September, many of whom have case histories identical to those granted such status.

Saperia and others argue that the energy being put into shortterm fixes should be redirected to winning approval for new numbers and dollars to meet the immediate needs. US officials hope private groups and ethnic communities will help meet the dollar crunch.

There is general agreement that in the longer term, the US and the Soviet Union should work out a regular means of handling emigration. On the US policy side, there seems to be significant support for creating a new "humanitarian entrant" category which would apply to emigrants seeking to leave a communist society.

Making U-turns was not a problem

But that style not only worked, it triumphed. The 40th President left office on Friday with the highest public approval ratings since the pollsters started keeping score. A New York Times-CBS News poll conducted Jan 12 to 15 showed 68-per cent approval of Reagan's job performance. That's nine points higher than the farewell approval rating of the late President Dwight Eisenhower. And Reagan made those numbers count politically. He was the first president in 60 years to leave the office at the inauguration of an elected successor of his own party. For Reagan, the genius was not in the details but, more often, turns without a organ, and usually without a problem. He campaigned against deficits and tripled them. He won the biggest tax cut in US history and later quietly signed the biggest increase. He denounced Moscow's "evil empire," then fashioned a "new closeness" with the Soviet Union under new leadership.

Deficit

A prime exhibit: the swollen US budget deficit.

LONDON, (Reuter): Britain is treading the increasingly crow-ded corridors of Middle East diplomacy carefully as it seeks to reward the PLO for its new moderation while calming Israeli tempers.

Statements by a junior Foreign Office minister recalling the guerrilla background of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir in British mandate Palestine threatened to upset the balance of Britain's diplomacy in an area where it once enjoyed considerable influence.

The fact that the minister, William Waldegrave, spoke after a meeting with PLO Chairman Yasser Ārafat which marked Britain's upgrading of contacts with Arafat to ministerial level led to accusations by Israel that Britain had fallen for the PLO's "charm offensive."

Waldegrave said the PLO had met Britain's preconditions for dialogue and he urged Israel to react positively. Abandon

Just as the Israelis abandoned the gun so they should believe that there were people on the Palestinian side who could do the same, he added. The Israeli embassy in London responded angrily and reiterated its government's belief that "the road to the Middle East does not lead through the PLO."

It was the second time in less than a month that the embassy felt obliged to criticise Britain's overtures to the PLO.

Nor did Israeli diplomats agree with Waldegrave's warning that Israel risked being left behind unless it changed its policy and agreed to talk to the PLO.

Reagan's style worked

early in his first term, and worsened because he couldn't get half the spending curbs he sought. By Reagan's reckoning, he hadn't changed, conditions had. So he kept making the deficit speech while the deficit soared on his watch.

But in six of the eight Reagan budget years, the budget passed by Congress actually was lower than that proposed by the administration.

Supplemental appropriations. approved after the budget resolution was adopted, pushed actual spending higher than the Reagan budget in all but two of those years. Those additions were the handiwork of both Congress and the administration

Reagan campaigned in 1980 with a promise to balance the budget within a four-year term. The federal debt has nearly tripled, to $2.6 billion, during his two years. The average deficit was $180 billion.

With deficits worsening, Reagan insisted that the budget had not been a campaign commitment: "I've never said anything but that it was a goal."

He promised a military buildup and he delivered, a $2.4 trillion expansion during his eight years. That fed the deficit and the struggle over priorities that raged through both his

Reagan political challenges stayed the hands of two presidents, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter, in arms control dealings with Moscow. Ford dropped the word "detente" from his vocabulary while fending off Reagan in 1976. Compared with the Reagan-era thaw, Ford's detente was a chill.

Reagan's farewell address described "a satisfying new closeness with the Soviet Union." He and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev signed the treaty to scrap intermediate range nuclear missiles, met at the summit five times in three years and fashioned a dramatically different relationship between Washington and Moscow.

Reagan said that was possible because "this time, so far, it's different," the Soviet Union has changed. Reagan changed, too, but he wasn't given to mentioning it. When the Iran arms sales of 1985 and 1986 were disclosed. Reagan insisted he had not tried to trade arms for hostages. The record showed otherwise.

When his own investigating commission said so, the president acknowledged that what he called an attempted opening to Iran had deteriorated into arms Even then, he said "my heart and my best intentions still tell me" it wasn't a trade despite "the facts and the evidence." Soon afterward he reverted to the notrade position and stuck with it

Macau fighting a losing battle

By Diane Stormont

MACAU, (Reuter): Fearing a massive influx of youths from China into the tiny Portuguese territory, Macau government officials were careful to give no warning of a recent limited amnesty for illegal immigrants. Despite the effort, word quickly spread through the villages of the Pearl River delta and hundreds of young Chinese sneaked past border patrols to try their luck during a surprise two-day amnesty early in Jan-

Some swam the few hundred yards (metres) across Duck Channel which separates the Macau peninsula from mainland China. Others paid professional smugglers for a speed-boat ride to isolated beaches. "It's impossible to say how many got through but 370 were detained while trying to cross," said Jose Fernando Proenca de Almeida, a colonel in the Macau security forces. But even for those who got through the effort was not worth it. They could not qualify for residency because the moratorium applied only to children under 18 born in Macau of illegal immigrants.

Undeterred, many joined the crush hoping to slip through somehow. Police estimated 30,000 people turned up outside the registration centre but the mainlanders were distinguishable by their cheap clothing and short haircuts.

The crowds were swelled further by older illegal immigrants already living in Macau who police said had misunderstood the terms of the moratorium.

The size of the crowds caught the authorities by surprise... Government estimates had suggested there were only 3,500 children of illegal immigrants in Macau eligible for registration.

Salvador Dali: a man of many masks

FIGUERAS, Spain, (Reuter): Salvador Dali, the flamboyant Spanish surrealist painter who loved to shock, was a man of many masks and an enigma perhaps even to himself.

He never appeared to resolve the conflict between artist and showman within him. As everything he did was colourful and on an extravagant scale. critics sometimes wondered how great an artist he really was.

Dali, who died yesterday aged 84, was one of the last survivors of a generation which stormed the art world in the 1930s. Pioneers

One of the pioneers of surrealism, he was also a writer, stage designer, jeweller, film-maker and book illustrator.

His pronouncements became as famous as his works - at the age of seven he wrote an autobiography proclaiming his intention of being a genius.

Later he claimed his famous waxed moustaches were antennae picking up cosmic vibrations, and he once declared the railway station at the southwestern French town of Perpignan to be the centre of the universe.

But he was perhaps most famous for paintings in which he sought to impose a hallucinatory vision on reality and transform it with fantastic shapes and juxtapositions, such as the "soft watches" drooping over tables.

Technique

His meticulous technique lent an almost photographic air to dream-like pictures in which the same shape could resemble both a swan and an elephant, a pile of rocks and a kneeling man.

Born in Figueras, in the north-ern corner of Catalonia, on May 11, 1904, Dali studied art in the 1920s in Madrid and was suspended for a year for inciting students to insurrection. Jailed briefly for subversion, he was finally expelled from college for refusing to sit an examination on the grounds that his professors were not competent to judge him. Like many artists of the time,

Dali was drawn to Paris and after arriving in 1926 soon became one of the leading figures in Andre Breton's surrealist movement.

Despite a friendship with Picasso, Dali was never interested in the Cubist School's reconstructions of reality. His "soft watches," he said, represented Einstein's space-time concept and were made of "paranoic critical camembert."

Surrealism, he said, was a "spontaneous method of irrational understanding based on the interpretative critical association with delirious phen-

He said bones should be worn outside, rather than beneath, the flesh. "The spectre of sexappeal" illustrated his theory that women should satisfy an innate exhibitionism by detaching parts of their bodies and handing them round to be admired.

But his insistence on precise graphic style eventually led Dali away from the surrealists. By the late 1930s he had returned to classicism and was becoming influenced by the Italian renaissance and its fleshy sensuality. In 1940 he moved to the United States where he achieved considerable commercial success with a series of religiously-ins-pired paintings like "The Last Supper" and "The Crucifixion."

Despite making millions of dollars with his work, money was never Dali's strong point. He was notoriously bad at managing his own affairs; with the result that his trust was often abused and he became the victim of unscrupulous commercialisation.

Dali's meticulous technique lent an almost photographic air to dream ~ like pictures.

Allegations of widespread forgeries surfaced, especially after a fire at his 11th century castle home at Pubol, Spain, in August 1984 in which he was badly burned.

Dali's break with surrealism marked a new political phase for the former student rebel. He converted to Roman Catholicism. became a royalist, and lived without qualms in Spain under the Franco dictatorship.

Spectacular

Political conservatism, however, did not prevent him from continuing his spectacular public behaviour. Once he met the press wearing a diving suit and leading two wolfhounds. In Rome in 1954 he emerged from a large egg declaring "I am reborn."

He later claimed to be apolitical — "I am a Dalian" but his reconciliation with democratic Spain was gradual. King Juan Carlos made him a Marquis in 1982 for his "exceptional contribution to Spanish

The king opened a major retrospective exhibition on Dali in 1983 and the artist responded by announcing he was leaving all his works to the Spanish state.

Even the Soviet Union recognised his genius with a major exhibition in 1988. Late in life he became a recluse, shattered by the death of his Russian-born wife and muse Gala in 1982. He said life meant nothing without her, had her buried at Pubol, shut himself away for two years and virtually stopped painting.

When the 1984 fire, caused probably by an electrical short circuit, engulfed his bedroom, Dali was found to be emaciated and doctors and friends said he had refused to eat because he wanted to die.

Relatives and others said, however, that he had been neglected by friends and servants who looked after him. After seven weeks in hospital, Dali moved to a medieval tower decorated with giant eggs and bread rolls at his museum in Figueras. A nervous disease similar to Parkinson's made his hands shake. In one of his last interviews, Dali said: "The best gift anyone could give me would be to leave me alone."

Twiggy: facing forty ... and still fabulous

By John Smith

MORE than 20 years on, Twiggy can still laugh at the jokes she once inspired in every bar-room in Britain. Q: What does Twiggy have tat-toed on her chest? A: This side up.

"Somebody gave me a badge from the Sixties the other day," she recalls with a chuckle. "It said: 'Forget Oxfam - feed Twiggy.' "

And again the laughter rings out as the skinny kid from Neasden who became an international star recalls those madcap days when Twiggy was the Face of The Sixties and her matchstick figure kept comedians in jokes for years.

She'll be 40 next birthday. But it's hard to believe it as she sits in her elegant Earls Court flat smiling impishly through the kind of baby blue eyes that are enough to make a married man leave home.

At the height of her teenage modelling triumph, she weighed 6-1/2 st. Now she's around 8 st. but the pounds have crept into all the right places and she can still look stunning in a mini-skirt.

"Reaching 40 doesn't worry me," she says, brushing back her long blonde hair and bustling into the kitchen to make instant coffee. "Anyway, I couldn't really lie about it or hide it. My age has been written about since I was 16."

Birthdays aside, 1989 promises to be a big year in the continuing career of the formal Lesley Hornby whose unashamed accent still owes more to London than Los Angeles. She plays Charlie Chaplin's mother in a six-part series.

"It was a smashing, meaty part for me to get," she enthuses. "It's quite a harrowing story — I end up in an asylum. I cried my eyes out when I read the script.

"It's not a glamorous part. For the first ten minutes I look OK, but after that I look dreadful." So convincing is her portrayal of the dreadfully abused Hannah Chaplin that Twiggy's ten-yearold daughter Carly — from her marriage to American actor Michael Whitney — got quite upset to see her distressed mum on screen during a preview. She announced loudly: want to leave, I want to leave!" The Chaplin role is a further

The original script called for Twiggy to bare all in a nude scene, but the lady who was once the best known model in the world balked at stripping. "I won't do nudity. I would feel terribly uncomfortable,. especially as I have a young daughter. It would embarrass her — and me.

"I went to tea with John Schlesinger and explained the problem, and he was lovely. He said the nudity wasn't necessary to the story. I can't even remember the details - it was something like walking around the flat with no clothes on. We agreed that it was just as easy for me to be dressed as undressed."

The conniving agent who exploits pop star Twiggy in the film is played by Leigh Lawson, the Travelling Man actor she married last year.

While delighted to be working alongside him, Twiggy resents suggestions that she and her handsome husband have now become an inseparable show business "package deal."

She was particularly angered by a recent suggestion that she and Leigh, who has two young sons, were packing their bags and leaving London to star in an American TV series which Twiggy had only agreed to do if Leigh was included in the cast. "It's true we've both been approached by a major American studio to do a pilot show for a series. But nothing is finalised — as yet there is not even a script or a starting date.

"Meantime, Leigh and I are getting on with our separate careers. Her plans also include a determined attempt to move away from the Twiggy image. "I knew I can never kill the Twiggy thing," she concedes.

Taxi drivers still yell: 'Allo, Twigs' when they see me. "And being Twiggy was nothing to be ashamed of. What happened to me was a ten million to one chance." She pauses, sapphire eyes shining at the mere thought of such a

Cinderella saga Yet if the fawn-eyed image of the teen-age model of yesteryear lingers on, nowhere will it be more fondly harboured than in the heart of the leggy London schoolgirl.

From reading our columns, you might come to think that an expert declarer knows where every card is and never has to rely on guesswork. Not so. Every once in a while a hand comes along where, no matter what your level of skill, you are completely at sea. For instance, consider this hand from a team match.

Both Souths arrived at a contract of four hearts after similar auctions.

North discounted his queen of diamonds when he decided to bid only two hearts at his first turn, but he made up for that when his partner made a game try.

At both tables West took the first two tricks with high diamonds while East echoed to show an even number of cards in the suit by first playing the seven. West continued with the jack of diamonds.

At one table, declarer decided that, for his vulnerable overcall, West was more likely to hold the queen of hearts, so he chose to ruff with the eight in dummy. East overruffed and cashed the ace of spades for the setting trick.

At the other table, declarer reasoned that, since West held six diamonds, he was likely to be short in hearts. As that might have persuaded him to finesse East for her majesty anyway, declarer opted to ruff with the king of trumps and then run the ten. When that won, the next round of trumps enabled declarer to pick up the queen and claim his contract.

Who was right? There's little to choose. However, we are a trifle more impressed by the latter argument. Could it be because it proved to be right?

Scientists battle for Brazilian wildlife

By Brian Nicholson

SAO PAULO, Brazil, (UPI): Racing against time, American scientists are training Brazilian zookeepers to save exotic animals threatened by immediate extinction as the Amazon jungle is hacked and burned away.

"In another generation or two, even if we can no longer see these animals in the wild, with luck we might still be able to see them in captivity," said Dr Chris Wemmer of the Smithsonian Institution, based in Washington, D.C.

"The stakes are very high in Brazil," said Wemmer, 45, in an interview at Sao Paulo zoo. 'There's a great richness of wildlife, but the forest is being cut down so fast it's creating a unique problem.

The Smithsonian is focusing on Brazil as part of a worldwide drive to educate zookeepers. It wants zoos to become guardians for many species that mankind will otherwise exterminate.

Wemmer is assistant conservation director at the Smithsonian's National Zoo Park at Front Royal, Virginia, which participated in the saving of at least one animal, the beautiful golden lion tamarin, from the brink of extinction.

Dwindled

The silky-haired, squirrel-sized monkey lives in Brazil's coastal Atlantic forest. But the forest has virtually disappeared, plundered for firewood and farmiand.

The tamarin dwindled to a few dozen before American and then European zoologists set up an international breeding programme. Now the tamarin is back up to a safe level, at least in captivity, and zoos have released some families into a reserve north of Rio de Janeiro.

"That's the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, to rein-troduce a species," Wemmer-

But that operation involvedjust one species and major international zoos. If a significant number of threatened Amazon species are to be saved, Brazil's own 60-plus zoos must do the Building on earlier Smithsonian programmes in Thailand and Malaysia, Wemmer spent a month teaching Brazilian 200keepers how to control breeding and establish a solid gene pool for each vanishing animal. "Some animals that are extremely rare in American zoos are commonplace here, so no real effort is being made to save them," Wemmer said.

Forests and scrublands are. disappearing so fast that local zoos receive a constant supply of rare beasts. Farmers often raise them as pets, then donate them to zoos when the animals grow and become difficult to handle. This plentiful supply creates a false sense of security for zookeepers.

But in 10 or 15 years this flow will dry up, and if nothing is done now these species will vanish," Wemmer said.

Top of the list is a brilliant blue parrot called the hyacinth macaw, a bird that fetches $6,000 or $7,000 in the United States. Just 1,000 or 2,000 remain, Wemmer said. But because they still seem plentiful in Brazil only a couple of local zoos have tried to mate them.

Other top worries from the jungle and Brazil's grassland and swamp regions are the giant anteater, the giant otter, another member of the parrot family called the gold conure and the maned wolf, a curious animal that has evolved stilt-like legs for striding through tall grasses.
Each of these species probably numbers in the low thousands. Anna Guttemberg, ecology director of the Sao Paulo-based International Union for Animal Protection, said Brazil's natural abundance deluded people. "We act like it will go on forever, more fertile land, more animals," she said.

The situation in the Amazon is most critical. Huge areas are being flooded behind hydroelectric dams. Unlicensed lumberiacks rip swathes through virgin forest, uncontrolled gold prospecting kills entire rivers with mercury poisoning, widespread burning destroys thousands of square miles each year and haphazard colonization brings hordes of peasants into close contact with wildlife.

"Often these peasants shoot anything that moves, be it rare animal or an Indian," Gutternberg said.

There is also a clear commercial interest for smugglers in making species as rare as possible.

"The profit on a live animal or on skin, teeth or claws becomes greater with rarity," she said.

Brazilian law bans the sale and export of endangered species and police make occasional wellpublicised seizures. However, Guttemberg said, the govern-ment generally seemed little interested in wild animals.

She praised the Smithsonian programme but said more international pressure was needed to save the Amazon and its animals. "Brazilian nature-lovers can't do it by themselves," she said.

"The Amazon is a heritage of all mankind." Wemmer said he will ask the US government and private foundations to fund an on-going zoo programme. "Half a million dollars, even $100,000 a year, could make a real difference," he said. "It would help teach zookeepers and set up computerized breeding

Big game hunting is big business in Tanzania

By David Ress

ARUSHA, Tanzania, (Reuter): Big game is big business in parts

Tourists pay millions of dollars a year to come and see Africa's wildlife — and smuggiers pay millions more in strictly illegal purchases of ivory and rhino horn from poachers.

In Tanzania, the government charges $2500 for each elephant legally shot by a hunter.

That is just the start of the money the government makes' from the scores of big game hunters who come here, the main jumping-off point for the rolling plains and desolate mountains of northern and western Tanzania.

Tanzania is one of the few places left where hunters can legally kill big game.

"We have enough animals here." said Muhidin Ndolanga, general manager of the Tanzania Wildlife Corporation, the stateowned company which runs all the country's hunting safaris.

"If people want to pay money to kill some, well then they might as well do it here," he said.

However, as poachers step up the slaughter, governments across Africa are concerned that soon they may not have the animals that tourists want to see.

Kenya banned big game hunting in 1977 and this year said poachers would be shot on sight. Three have been already, and even more have been killed in Zimbabwe, the only other country with a shoot-to-kill policy towards poachers.

In Zambia, the government has been steadily cutting down the number of hunting safaris allowed to about half a dozen a year. A handful of countries, including Ethiopia and the Central African Republic, allow a small number of hunters.

But about 200 hunters a year come to Tanzania. Their bag runs to about 100 elephant a year, in addition to game ranging from lion to baboons. In contrast, in just one August raid. Tanzanian police seized the tusks of 198 elephants killed by poachers.

Poachers kill several thousand elephants every year. Tanzania gets nothing of their earnings, but the government made $3.5 million from its-hunting safaris last year.

Ndolanga said he expects income will rise this year. Only some of this comes from the government's killing fees -$2,500 a head for elephant, $1,400 for lion and leopard and $365 dollars for a zebra. Cheetah, rhinoceros and giraffe may not be killed.

Change

To shoot elephants or the big cats, hunters must sign up for at least a 21-day safari, at a cost of between $560 and 825 per person per day, depending on how large their party is and how many profesionals are hired to help them find their animals. Every change of camp costs another $1,850 while transport to the hunting grounds ranges from $1,200 to 2,100 per vehicle. Chartered aircraft, liquor and soft drinks are extra, as is the $1,000 fee for packing, documenting and shipping each trophy the hunter decides to keep.

"The thing we have had the greatest difficulty with is formalising all the concepts around poaching. What is the relationship between the number of men on the ground and the rate at which poachers make incur-

Since 1984, when poaching gangs began crossing into Zim-babwe from Zambia, they have killed at least 460 black rhino. Some 47 poachers have been shot dead and more than 30 jailed.

Martin says one clear result of his research is that the high death rate among poachers has not acted as a deterrent the rate of incursions has stayed steady at around 50 a year.

Assuming that poaching will go on, research is now centred on answering the question: how long does a poacher have to kill rhino until he is detected. On average, he will kill a rhino every two days.

"If you kill him, well and good, if you capture him, well and good, it doesn't make any difference what you do to him. What matters is how long it took you to find him."

"I think you've got to accept that illegal hunting is on the increase in Africa for the foresceable future in a major way .. the emphasis has got to be on detection," Martin says.

Poach

"The state of affairs in Africa now with incredibly poor economic conditions, a breakdown of law and order, impoverished people who have no prospect of reasonable living ... they are going to go for rhino wherever the opportunity crops up."

So far Zimbabwe's national parks have had more success than anywhere else in black Africa against the poachers. But the outlook is far from bright. Martin foresees that elephant populations in some other countries will be wiped out in the next decade by poachers. "Can you imagine the pressure there is going to be down here on ele-

Acting chief warden Glen Tatham says there are signs that Zimbabweans are beginning to poach — a threat which the national parks will find it hard to

"If internal poaching really takes off, we don't stand a chance," says Raoul du Toit, a Zimbabwean biologist and rhino expert who has spent most of 1988 flying over the Zambezi valley trying to count the remaining rhino from the air.

Black rhino are solitary beasts who like dense bush, so counting them is a difficult exercise. But the counting, funded by the World Wide Fund for Nature in Switzerland, is a vital element in current research.

The exact total of rhino is being kept confidential, but he has found a still-viable population of several hundred. So how long will the rhino survive in the Zambezi valley? Martin says that if there are more than 1,000, they will not go extinct by the year 2000.

"If there are 500, they won't last as long. If there are as few as 250 then we're in a crisis situation." The answer, he says, will have to be more money for protection from government.

Martin believes on the basis of his research that Zimbabwe needs a minimum of one man per 50 square km (20 sq miles) to have a chance of catching poachers, and preferably one man per 20 square km (eight sq miles). 'If you can't manage one man per 100 square km (40 sq miles) you can forget it."

Zimbabwe has already stepped up funding for anti-poaching operations, and foreign conservationists are helping plug the gaps by buying radios, Land-Rovers and equipment.

The World Wide Fund for Nature is paying $45,000 (US$22,500) a month for a light helicopter, but funding has only been promised to next April. Beyond that date, the fund is likely to want hard evidence that its money is being well spent.

Against this background of mounting costs and uncertain success, some wildlife enthusiasts in Zimbabwe have called for a radical change of approach. Why not dehorn as many rhino as possible and legalise trade in rhino horn to raise funds for conservation? The idea would be to imitate the tightly controlled legal trade in ivory from the tusks of elephants culled to keep down numbers in national parks.

"We don't know what happens to dehorned rhinos in biological terms. But we do know what happens to rhinos with horns on: they get shot by poachers," the magazine Zimbabwe Wildlife said.

National parks officers say there is nothing wrong with such ideas in principle, but they are impractical. Acting chief Warden Glen Tatham says that to meet current world demand would require about five tonnes of rhino horn a year.

NICOSIA, Cyprus, Jan 23, (AP): A sharp drop in the price of Dubai oil, the yardstick for Gulf oil sales in the Far East, has stirred anxiety among the region's producers because it has cut into their vital oil revenues. the Middle East Economic Survey reported today.

SEOUL, Jan 23, (OPECNA): South Korea will step up efforts to develop overseas energy resources by setting up joint ventures with developing countries in a move to take advantage of its trade surplus, according to Energy and Resources Minister Lee Bong-Suh.

Lee said his ministry would also move from indirect imports of energy resources, such as coal. to direct imports in line with a government policy to improve relations with socialist countries. Prices

iraq looks to private sector to spark tourism boom

BAGHDAD, Jan 23, (Reuter): Iraq, home of some of the world's oldest archaeological sites, is turning to the private sector to spark a tourist boom after eight years of war with Iran.

As part of a drive to loosen rigorous state control of the economy, the official press has said major hotels and almost all state-run tourist firms will be sold off in whole or part.

Al Iraq daily on Saturday quoted tourism commission chief Abdul Tawab Al Mullah Huwaish as saying 38 tourist enterprises would be offered in their entirety to Iraqi and other Arab companies

A 51 per cent stake in 36 other firms would be sold off, he said. To ensure their freedom from state control, no government representatives would sit on their

The Tourist Commission said last week that 51 per cent of the 21-storey Baghdad Sheraton Hotel is to be offered to private investors and run by a company with capital of 50 million dinars

It said that Saudi Arabia, the biggest Gulf producer has advised customers in the Far East of cuts in February deliveries, apparently because of the Dubai price slump.

The Dubai price normally fluctuates by about $1.50-2.00 a barrel below the price of crude from Britain's Brent field in the North Sea, the benchmark price for most producers.

But MEES said that in recent months the Dubai differential has slipped to a monthly average a huge volume of crude from of $2.15 a barrel below Brent elsewhere in the Gulf." since October, with a gap of $3.00 a barrel in December.

"This has naturally caused heavy price losses for the Gulf oil exporters and widespread doubts in their ranks regarding the suitability of Dubai as a reference price yardstick on an unregulated basis," the weekly newsletter noted.

"Gulf oilmen feel that the Dubai market is simply too thin ... volatile and open to manipulation to play an adequate role as the main price reference for such

The newsletter said that one solution gaining wide support among Gulf producers is for them "to take collective action to put a ceiling of $2.00 a barrel on the Brent/Dubai differential for the purposes of their own price

It noted that the Dubai price has shot up by around $2 a barrel in the last week, "perhaps as a result of Japanese fears of an impending volume squeeze on Gulf crude deliveries to far East markets, to $16.05 a barrel Jan 19 compared to $17.65 for Brent.

While this narrowed the price gap to around $1.60 a barrel, this sudden improvement is unlikely to allay the fears of the Gulf producers regarding the unreliability of Dubai as a price yardstick," the weekly said.

"In fact, it could be taken as added proof of the unsatisfactory volatility of the Dubai market and the consequent need for a precautionary ceiling on the

Brent/Dubai differential. MEES said Saudi deliveries to Japan's Mitsubishi will be slashed by 24 per cent from 100,000 barrels a day to 76,000, to Kyodo oil by 30 per cent from 50,000 barrels a day to 35,000 and to India by 25 per cent from 60,000 barrels a day to 45,000.

The weekly noted however that Taiwan's CPC will get its full contract volume of 100,000 barrels a day from Saudi Arabia and that European customers will also get their full volume. Some of Saudi Arabia's US partners in the Arabian American Oil Co. will have their deliveries cut by 10-20 per cent in February, the newsletter added.

Japan's inflation outlook gloomy

US treasury market fails to maintain its upward trend

THE major financial markets were once again characterised by volatility in the last quarter of 1988, with the bond sectors especially encountering sharp downturns (except Japan), lar-gely influenced by the fluctuating currency markets coupled with a strong pick-up in economic activity, according to Kuwait

International Nevertheless, the Japanese market performed remarkably well in terms of bonds, stocks and currencies, while the US market was rather uninspiring with the exception of stocks. The West German, Dutch and UK bond markets failed to sustain the upward momentum though the currency markets rallied sharply, with the equity markets maintaining the positive tendency (except UK

Extended

The Japanese bond market extended its gains despite a gloomy inflation outlook caused by soaring crude oil prices. Contributing to the improved trend were: a strong upturn in the yen against the dollar partly attributed to increased pessimism over the reduction in the US trade and budget deficits, the continued accommodative monetary stance by the Bank of Japan, and the favourable supply/demand situation. Moreover, the equity market

Trading was enlivened by the relative strength of the Japanese economic fundamentals underscored by a robust 9.3 per cent year-on-year third quarter GNP growth rate particularly the startling 41.3 per cent surge in real exports, prospects for lower domestic interest rates, and favourable corporate earnings results. The US treasury market failed to maintain its upward trend, with the long bond yielding 9.17 per cent, the highest level since Sept 2. Gloom returned to the market reflecting mounting pessimism over the ability of the new President to devise any solutions for the huge trade and budget deficits reinforced by his opposition to tax increases (undermined the dollar sharply against most major currencies), and continued strong economic growth particularly the overall strength in consumer spending which rose 3.9 per cent in the third quarter as well as the manufacturing sector that operated closer to full capacity at 84.2 per cent in November than any month in nine years (implied higher imports and provoked concern over the possible Fed credit tight-

Participants were also unnerved by inflationary implications emanating from rising oil prices in the wake of recent OPEC accord to limit output in the first half of 1989 to 18.5 million barrels per day.

However, the stock market staged a modest rally with the DJIA trading above its post-October 1987 crash high set on Oct 21 of 2183.50, inspite a half point hike in US prime lending rate to 10.5 per cent, the highest point in about 3 1/2 years.

Prospects Investors were inspired by prospects for improvement in the. US budget deficit in light of the Soviet's disarmament proposal, renewed corporate takeover and restructuring activity, and sur-prisingly healthy corporate earnings results.

The West German bond market retreated sharply and encountered a steady-downward drift in prices, shrugging off a strengthening mark against the dollar amid an apparent discord between the US and West Germany on the dollar policy.

The turnaround in investors' sentiment reflected better than expected economic growth underlined by a 3.4 per cent GNP rate in the third quarter year-onyear coupled with persistent above target growth in the key monetary policy in light of strong money supply M3 (which heightened prospects for tighter monetary policy by the Bundesbank), increased inflationary threat posed by soaring oil prices and prospects of rising global interest rates spurred by signs of strong US economic growth.

Underpinned On the other hand, the stock market picked up steam to surge to the 1988 high of 553.59 on the FAZ index, although the downturn in the dollar kept international blue chips on the defen-

Prices were underpinned by increased optimism over the domestic economy underscored by the cumulative trade surplus for the first ten months of the year to DM101.4 billion i.e. 8.2 per cent above the total for the same period of 1987, excellent corporate profits which soared well over 10 per cent in 1988, and the favourable tendency of the Wall Street. The Dutch bond market eased back sharply, mirroring the los-ses suffered by the neighbouring German market. The decline was also powered by the planned postponement of a bond withholding tax in Germany until 1990, and a half point increase in the Dutch discount rate to 4.5 per cent (prompted expectations of further tightening in the Dutch domestic economy).

The gilt-edged market had a lacklustre performance, despite the Bank of England's continued gilt purchases to offset the monetary impact of the public sector surplus. Selling was touched off by persistent buoyancy in consumer spending regarded as a critical ingredient of inflation pressure in the UK economy which was partly highlighted by the annual growth rate of 8 per cent in November sterling money supply M0.

Adding to the market's lethargy were lingering concerns over currency risks arising from the negative balance of payments, and the Central Bank's restrictive monetary policy combined with the resultant one per cent hike in the base lending rate to 13 per cent, the highest level since 1985. Weakness

Moreover, the stock market experienced further weakness despite several major takeover activities. The downswing was accelerated by the negative implications of the dollar's slide for UK export-oriented companies, prospects for higher domestic interest rates enhanced by renewed evidence of overheating in the economy which would temporarily halt the government's tax reducing plans, and a couple of rights issues.

China's foreign trade grows despite economic disarray

BEIJING, Jan 23, (AP): China's foreign trade was up 16.6 per cent in 1988 despite economic disarray, sharp spending cuts and restrictions on some imports and exports, the Trade Ministry announced today.
Exports reached $40.1 billion, up 15.5 per cent, while imports increased 17.7 per cent over 1987 to $39.3 billion, said Liu Xiangdong, spokesman for the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade.

The surplus of $785 million on total trade of $79.4 billion was the second in a row, following a surplus of $1.3 billion in 1987, Liu said at a news conference.

The ministry's figures, as is normally the case, differed substantially from those of the State Statistical Bureau, which last week said China had a deficit of $7.7 billion on total trade of $102.9 billion.

Foreign economists consider the Statistical Bureau's figures to be more complete and generally

US to let five oil firms resume Libyan operations

WASHINGTON, Jan 23, (Reuter): The United States said yesterday it was modifying trade sanctions against Libya to allow five US oil companies to resume their Libyan operations or transfer them to foreign subsidiaries.

"The change will allow them to transfer operations to foreign subsidiaries or to operate their assets using third country nationals," State Department spokesman Charles Redman said at a news briefing.

Sanctions The five companies affected are Conoco, Marathon, Amerada Hess, Occidental and

W.R. Grace. Under US sanctions imposed on Libya in 1986, these firm were issued special licences to negotiate "standstill agreement" with the Libyan government under which they would suspend their Libyan operations without being charged with defeault on

The decision on the five oil companies was announced on the last full day of the Reagan administration, leading to speculation that the timing was intended to avoid forcing the incoming administration of President Bush to make a decision that could cause embarrassment by appearing to ease sanctions on Libya.

World Business Summary

Britain wins appeal on Harrods takeover case

LONDON, Jan 23, (Reuter): Britain's Conservative government won an appeal yesterday against a high court order requiring it to refer to a monopolies watchdog body a 1985 takeover of the firm which owns London's chic department store Harrods. The Court of Appeal also allowed Trade Secretary Lord Young's appeal against a court declaration requiring him to reconsider his decision to defer publication of a controversial official report on the takeover pending a police probe. The decision was a victory for Young, whose lawyers had argued that the high court had set a risky precedent in questioning the procedure of making referrals to the state Monopolies and Mergers Commission. His lawyers also maintained that early publication of the report could prejudice court hearings. The ruling was a blow for mines-to-hotel conglomerate Lonrho PLC, which had unsuccessfully bid for the House of Fraser Group which owns Harrods. The retail chain was bought instead by the three Egyptian-born Al Fayed Brothers. Lourho, owned by tycoon Roland "Tiny" Rowland, sought a referral of the takeover and alleged that the Fayeds had lied about the scale and sources of their financial resources. But the Faveds. who have defamation actions pending against Lourho, say the latest court action is merely the "culmination of a four-year campaign of vilification" against them. Lourbo expressed disap-pointment at yesterday's decision but said it would appeal to the House of Lords, Britain's highest legal body. That appeal was expected to be heard within about three weeks. The conglomerate originally bid for the firm and built a 29.9 per cent stake. Its offer was blocked by the Monopolies Commission and Lourbo sold off its holding to the Fayeds, who won control of House of Fraser in March, 1985.

Turkish fuel prices expected to stabilise in liberal market

ISTANBUL, Jan 23, (Reuter): Turkish fuel prices are expected to stabilise when plans to liberalise the state-dominated fuel oil and petroleum market go into effect after some more than doubled last year. Turkish officials said last week private sector companies would be allowed to buy and sell on the domestic market at their own price levels. "Price adjustments will be a way of fine-tuning and there will be a very stable market unlike the government's sudden price hikes," said a senior industry source. The government last mouth increased consumer prices for petrol and petroleum products by up to 20 per cent — the seventh increase in 1988 as part of a campaign to curb its $2.3 billion budget deficit. Petrol prices rose 101 per cent last year. The government is at present the sole authority setting prices for fuel oil, its importation and processing at state-run refineries. "Our system should be similar to Western ones," Mehmet Savran, chairman of the state-operated Tupras Petroleum Corporation told Reuters. "Liberalisation is due in the first half of 1989 ... we will continue to watch the sector," a senior energy official said. Turkey imports nearly 80 per cent of its fuel needs from Iran and Iraq and expects to pay around $2.4 billion for the 21.9 million tonnes it plans to bring in during 1989.

WHO approves budget

GENEVA, Jan 23, (Reuter): The World Health Organisation (WHO) has agreed to spend 13.5 US cents per year for every person in the world over the next two years to raise global health standards. A statement issued on Friday at the end of the WHO executive board meeting, accepted Director-General Hiroshi period, $44 million up on 1988-89. Voluntary contributions made outside the regular budget — for which compulsory assessments are made — would provide approximately $700 million of additional support to special WHO programmes around the world, the statement added. A spokesman for the Geneva-based UN organisation said the extra money would come from governments, as well as public and private institutions to support specific programmes, such as the fight against AIDS. WHO, founded in 1948, has 166 member nations and is engaged in a campaign to provide essential health care for the world's population by the

London Stock Market Report

UK STOCKS EASE SHARPLY AFTER WALL ST TURNS LOWER

LONDON, JAN 23, REUTER - SHARES EASED SHARPLY FROM THEIR HIGHS IN LATE TRADING AFTER AN EARLY SURGE ON WALL STREET RAN out of steam and the market there turned lower

"MARKET MAKERS WHO HAVE BEEN CAUGHT SHORT OF STOCK BY THE RECENT RALLY ARE ONLY TOO HAPPY TO HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY TO MARK PRICES LOWER SO THEY CAN PAD OUT THEIR OWN POSITIONS," ONE DEALER SAID. "THE BEARS HAVE CERTAINLY BEEN GIVEN A ROASTING BY THE UNEXPECTED NEW YEAR RALLY," HE ADDED. BY 1621 GHT THE FTSE 100 WAS UP JUST 4.2 POINTS AT 1,921.7

AFTER TOUCHING A HIGH OF 1,938.6 AT 1336 GMT. TRADERS SAID THIS YEAR'S RALLY OF OVER 125 POINTS ON THE FTSE 100 INDEX HAS COME BASICALLY ON THE BACK OF SPECULATION THAT U.K. INTEREST RATES WILL NOT RISE FROM THEIR CURRENT 13 PCT LEVEL. HOWEVER, SOME WARNED THAT SUCH HOPES MAY BE PREMATURE. I KNOW THAT RECENT (U.K.) ECONOMIC NUMBERS HAVE SHOWN A SLONDOWN IN THE ECONOMY BUT I PERSONALLY THINK THERE IS MORE BAD NEWS TO COME......FRIDAY'S (U.K.) TRADE FIGURES MAY WELL SE A

WATERSHED." ONE CHIEF EQUITY TRADER SPECULATED. HE WENT ON TO DESCRIBE THE CURRENT EQUITY RALLY AS "SHORT SIGHTED" AND SAID THE FTSE 100 COULD EASE BACK TO BETWEEN 1,800 AND 1,850 IF FRIDAY'S FIGURES DISAPPOINT THE MARKET.

Services Viginia

LONDON, JAN 23, REUTER - GOLD BULLION CLOSED STEADY AFTER TRADING QUIETLY THROUGHOUT THE DAY, FINISHING AT 407.50/408.00
DLRS AN OUNCE LITTLE CHANGED FROM ITS OPENING BUT AROUND FOUR DLRS UP FROM FRIDAY'S CLOSE.

DEALERS SAID BULLION, LACKING ANY MAJOR INFLUENCES, REMAINED SUPPORTED BY A SMALL FOLLOW-THROUGH FROM THE SILVER-LED RALLY ON PLATINUM, AFTER OPENING HIGHER FOLLOWING NEW YORK, FAILED TO

GAIN MONENTUM AND TRADED IN A TIGHT FOUR DLR RANGE TO CLOSE AT 542_00/544_00 DLRS AN OUNCE COMPARED WITH THE OPENING OF 540.25/541.25 AND AGAINST FRIDAY'S 533.00/534.50 CLOSE.

London Money Market

LONDON, JAN 23, REUTER - BRITISH MONEY MARKET INTEREST RATES CLOSED 1/16 TO 1/8 POINT EASIER AFTER A REASONABLY ACTIVE DAY IN A FAIRLY BULLISH MARKET, DEALERS SAID. THE EASIER TONE REFLECTED GROWING MARKET OPTIMISM THAT BASE RATES HAVE PEAKED AT 13 PCT, AND THAT THEY WOULD SOON START A

SLOW DESCENT. DEALERS SAID, HOWEVER, THAT RATES! NEAR TERM DIRECTION WOULD DEPEND LARGELY ON DOMESTIC BALANCE OF PAYMENTS STATISTICS FOR

DECEMBER, TO BE RELEASED AT THE END OF THE WEEK. "IT LOOKS LIKE THE MARKET IS TRYING TO GEAR ITSELF FOR LOHER BASE RATES," ONE DEALER SAID.

Wall Street Market Report

NEW YORK, Jan 23, (Reuter): Wall Street blue chips fell, following the dollar's path, brokers said. They said the dollar dropped following intervention by central banks, which sold the US currency. Brokers said the equities market ignored bonds, which were mostly firmer.

"Equities seem to be more geared towards the dollar today," said a trader. The Dow Jones industrials were down four, at 2232. Declining Issues led gaining shares six to five.

Boeing Co shares were down 1-5/8, at 58-1/4. A US 'Air Group Inc unit's Boeing 737 was evacuated at Kennedy Airport,

Tokyo Stock Market Report

TOKYO STOCKS CLOSE HIGHER ON BARGAIN-HUNTING

TOKYO, JAN 23, REUTER - SHARE PRICES CLOSED HIGHER ON BARGAIN-HUNTING AFTER ITS DECLINES LAST WEEK AND NEWS OF A STRONGER YEN AND LOWER OIL PRICES ON FRIDAY, BROKERS SAID. THE GENERAL FEELING IS THAT THIS CANNOT LAST -- THE DOLLAR STRENGTH AND HIGH CIL PRICES. THE WORST-CASE FEARS HAVE ALREADY BEEN DISCOUNTED AND THE MARKET HAS TO BE BULLISH LOOKING TO THE END OF THE FISCAL YEAR (ON MARCH 31)," SAID CRAIG CHUDLER, A MARKET STRATEGIST AT SMITH NEW COURT.

THE NIKKEI INDEX ROSE 162.50 POINTS, OR 0.52 PCT, TO 31,332.88. IT WAS DOWN 141.02 POINTS ON FRIDAY AND 128 POINTS LAST WEEK.

THE FIRST SECTION INDEX, OR TOPIX, CLOSED UP 14.63 POINTS AT 2,440.35 AFTER LOSING 9.83 POINTS ON FRIDAY. RISES LED FALLS BY 1.7 TO ONE WITH 569 ISSUES HIGHER, 333 LOWER AND 175 UNCHANGED IN LIGHT TURNOVER OF ONE BILLION

SHARES AGAINST 1.1 BILLION. THE 10 BIGGEST GAINERS WERE WAREHOUSE, RAILWAY/BUS, GAS. NON-LIFE INSURANCE, BANK, CONSTRUCTION, SHIPBUILDING, AUTO, RETAIL AND ROLLING STOCK SHARES. THE 10 MAIN LOSERS WERE SECURITIES HOUSE, PULP/PAPER, ELECTRICAL, SERVICE, RUBBER, MACHINERY, FISHERY, OIL, NON-FERROUS METAL AND CHEMICAL STOCKS.

ALTHOUGH PRICES CLINBED SLOWLY ALL DAY FROM AN INITIAL LOW OF 31,199.14, FUTURES-RELATED BUYING BY FOREIGN BROKERAGES GAVE THEM A BIG BOOST NEAR THE CLOSE, ONE FUTURES TRADER SAID. THE NIKKEI PUT ON ABOUT 60 POINTS IN THE LAST HOUR OF TRADE TO CLOSE AT THE DAY'S HIGH.

"THE MARKET OVERREACTED A BIT ON FRIDAY AFTER WE HAD THE EUROPEAN INTEREST RATE HIKES AND WANTED TO WATCH WHAT WOULD HAPPEN. BUT FRIDAY TRADING SEEMED TO PROVE THAT CONCERNS ABOUT WILD MOVES IN CURRENCY AND INTEREST RATES MAY BE UNNECESSARY," SAID CHUDLER AT SMITH NEW COURT.

Hong Kong Market Report

HONG KONG, JAN 23, REUTER - HONG KONG STOCKS CONTINUED TO CONSOLIDATE IN QUIET TRADING DURING THE MORNING, BROKERS SAID. AFTER A FIRM OPENING, WHICH SAW THE HANG SENG INDEX AGAIN BREACH 2,900 TO 2,911, STOCKS ENDED THE HORNING LOWER, THE HANG SENG LOST 6.76 TO 2,891.15 AND THE HONG KONG INDEX EASED 3.82 TO 1,904.26. TURNOVER WAS A LIGHT 571.30 MLN H.K. DLRS.

SENG WILL STAY AROUND 2,900," A BROKER SAID. PROPERTIES LOST GROUND AND UTILITIES WERE UNCHANGED, BROKERS SAID. HANG SENG INDEX FUTURES WERE MIXED. JANUARY LOST THREE TO 2,910, FEBRUARY ADDED FIVE TO 2,960, APRIL SHED FIVE TO 2,975.

posit rates steady in quiet trade as liquidity remains high

KUWAIT, Jan 23, (Reuter): Kuwaiti dinar deposit rates were steady today in quiet trade as liquidity remained high from month-end government salary payments and offshore funds. Dealers said overnight and tomorrow-next were offered at one per cent, as they have been since Saturday, with spot-next offers at two per cent. Tomorrow-next business was reported at one per cent and oneweek offers at four per cent.

The fixed periods were near

Sunday levels at 6-3/4, 1/2 cent for the one-month, 7-1, 4, 6-3 4 per cent for the two-month, 7-1/2, 1 4 per cent for the threemonth and eight, 7-1/2 per cent for the six and 12-month maturities.

Silpped

The dinar slipped against the dollar, with the Central Bank fixing its dinar exchange rate first at 0.28580/90 and later at 0.28610 20 from 0.28551/61 since Saturday. Commercial banks quoted even easier spot rates of around 0.28625/35.

Meanwhile, Saudi riyal deposits eased in active trade which focussed on the short end of the market today as banks lent day-to-day funds, ending a fourday bull in activity.

Dealers said maturing forward deals for the corporate market may have contributed to an easing of recently tight liquidity, prompting the wave of lending. They said there was still no sign of government payments from the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency - a trend which has high.

Funds

Spot-next and one-week funds dropped to 9-1/8, 8-5/8 per cent from 9-3/4, 3/8 on Sunday and dealt at those levels. Some business was also reported in one to three-month deposits. The one-month dropped to 9-5/16, 3/16 per cent from 9-5/8, 9/16 and the three-month to 9-7/16, 5/16 from 9-5/8, 7/16 per cent.

Six-months and one-year deposits were both marked down 1/16 point to 9-5/8, 7/46- and 9-3/4, 5/8 per cent respectively. The spot rival eased to 3.7501, 05 to the dollar from 3.7497/00.

MERCK I ZURICK PS Steady US inflation lessens chances of tighter credit

WASHINGTON, Jan 23, (Reuter): Although US inflation was stable last year, the so-called core rate of inflation, which excludes erratic food and energy prices, rose to a four-year high in 1988, the Labour Department

While economists said they are troubled by the rising core infla-tion rate, they said the more moderate overall rise in consumer prices, eases pressure on federal policymakers to raise interest rates by tightening

The department said yesterday its consumer price index (CPI), the most widely used inflation gauge, rose 4.4 per cent last year, identical to its 1987 increase, and finished the year with rises of 0.3 per cent in November and December. Induced

Coming despite an eight-year high 5.2 per cent jump in food prices which was induced by last summer's drought, the stable 1988 inflation rate was welcome news in financial markets.

But economists still expect inflation to pick up slightly in 1989 and cited warnings signs within the latest price data that suggest somewhat sharper price hikes ahead.

The inflation rates of the past two years, while identical, were caused by vastly different forces, economists said.

The 1987 rate was driven mainly by energy, which stabilised last year, but is likely to resume its increase this year.

Last year's price increases were led by food and a host of other items that go into the core rate of inflation, which rose 4.7 per cent in 1988 after a 4.2 per cent gain in 1987. It was the sharpest rise in the core rate since 1984.

Troubling The core rate is considered

more troubling since it reflects factors, such as wages, that become more permanently embedded in the economy than food and energy prices.

"It shows that you've got somewhat of an upward trend developing there," said Donald Ratajczak, director of economic forecasting at Georgia State University.

Much of the reason for the higher core inflation rate was a 4.8 per cent increase in the cost of services, including medical, transportation and shelter, which accounts for more than half of the CPI and reflects growing pressure by workers for higher wages, economists said.

Nevertheless, with the overall inflation rate steady and hints that the economy may be slowing, the Federal Reserve Board, which has been trying to keep a lid on inflation, is less likely to tighten credit any further, economists said.

Recent reports showed slower growth in retail sales and industrial output last month.

Gold prices up

Central banks act to drive dollar down

LONDON, Jan 23, (Reuter): Nine central banks launched a new wave of open market dollar sales today, driving down the value of the US currency. Dealers said the banks appeared determined to stamp on any rebound by the dollar after they had hit it particularly hard last week by dumping up to $2 billion on the market to stop a disruptive New Year rally.

Speculators want dollars because of the good return offered by relatively high US interest rates. But a strong dollar puts up import bills around the globe, threatening more infla-

The banks last week pushed the dollar off 3-1/2 month highs above 1.87 West German marks and it ended on Friday at 1.8430.

They hit again today when new buying caused it to edge up to around 1.85 and it retreated to just under 1.84. Dealers said the banks of the United States, West Germany, France, Britain, Italy, Canada, Austria, Belgium and Spain took part in the new offensive. Price

The gold price was up $2.45 from Friday when set for this afternoon in a quiet London bullion market at $407.45 an ounce. The benchmark US treasury 30-year bond in London traded at 101.08/32 per cent, vielding 8.88 per cent.
Wall Street late in the evening recovered some of the early losses and the Dow Jones industrial average was down just 1.07 at 2,234.29 at the New York midday.

Today's currency market intervention began in the United States when the Federal Reserve sold at around 1.8480 marks. The dollar later closed in London at 1.8380 marks after Friday's 1.8430 and at 127.75 yen after

Intervention

It was the fourth successive trading day of intervention. European dealers thought the Bundesbank, at least may have sold only a small amount of dollars this time.

"I do not believe that they sold very much. Possibly 20 million," a Frankfurt dealer said. But the sales ambushed the dollar just as dealers thought the banks had given up for a bit.

In London shares eased sharply from their highs in late trading after an early surge on Wail Street ran out of steam and the market there turned lower.

Market-makers who have been caught short of stock by the recent rally are only too happy to have the opportunity to mark prices lower so they can pad out their own positions," one dealer said. "The bears have certainly unexpected New Year rally," he

By 1621 GMT the FTSE 100 was up just 4.2 points at 1,921.7 after touching a high of 1,938.6 at 1336 GMT.

Rally

Traders said this year's rally of over 125 points on the FTSE 100 index has come basically on the back of speculation that UK interest rates will not rise from their current 13 per cent level. However, some warned that such hopes may be premature.

"I know that recent (UK) economic numbers have shown a slowdown in the economy but I personally think there is more bad news to come ... Friday's (UK) trade figures may well be a watershed," one chief equity trader speculated.

He went on to describe the current equity rally as "short sighted" and said the FTSE 100 could ease back to between 1.800 and 1,850 if Friday's figures disappoint the market.

Turnover at 1600 GMT was 593 million shares with British Steel again heading the actives as institutional investors continued to find the stock attractive because of its high yield. Its shares were up lp to 70p with over 63 million traded. Other blue chip institutional favourites including British Gas, Motor components group Lucas stood out with a 15p rise to 586 amid market talk Fiat of Italy was considering a bid. But analysts pointed out that Fiat was the latest in a long series of rumoured bidders.

Lost

Electronics group STC lost 6p to 295 after Italian company Olivetti denied press reports it was in talks with STC about buying STC's computer processing unit ICL. STC shares rose strongly in the latter part of last week on rumours it was to sell part of its ICL division.

Building stocks were firm as operators switched out of Wimpey, down 19p to 282 on fading speculative support, with RMC up 14p to 552 and Redland 10p higher at 462. Traders noted, however, that despite some recent overseas demand for builders, the thin market in Redland and RMC shares have exaggerated their gains.

Higher

Reuters ended a net 13p higher at 614 against the background of continuing demand for its ADR's in the US but traders again cited stock shortage as the reason of much of the gain. Rank Organisation added 2p to 768 while Lonrho lost the same amount to 343, both ahead of annual figures later this week.

Consolidated Goldfields shed a net 9p to 1,285 with the market awaiting the outcome of the Monopolies Commission inquiry into the hostile but lapsed bid by Minorco.

Oils were lower as the spot crude price again dropped below the $17.50 a barrel level with Lasmo down 10p to 474 and recent speculative favourite Ultramar ip lower at 313.

Contract

British Aerospace ended 2p higher at 485, helped by news a consortium which it is heading won a UK government contract to build a data centre to process information from Satellites.

Unigate shed 9p to 355. It sold part of its milk business to Dairy Crest for £152 million. Thomson L-Line added 2p to 96p after Hanson said it had over five per cent of Thomson shares. Ladbroke, 9p up at 470, is bidding £135 million for Thomson.

Among smaller companies, British Island Airways slumped 25p to 113p after the company said talks with a potential bidder had been called off.

The FTSE 100 ended 7.2 up at 1,924.7, 649 million shares

EEC to consider retaliatory measures in US trade dispute

The issue under discussion by the foreign ministers of the 12 nations of the European Economic Community has threatened to become a trans-Atlantic trade war.

The community decided to ban US meat from cattle treated with growth hormones effective Jan 1. The United States retaliated by slapping higher tariffs on a variety of products from the common market trading bloc. Those also took effect

Earlier this month, representatives of the European nations agreed on a series of countermeasures that would boost duties on US imports of dried fruit and walnuts. The European Commission, the trading group's executive body, was to ask foreign ministers for permission to impose the retaliatory tariffs as soon as possible. Conflict

The ministers also may decide to await the results of a Feb 8 meeting of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. The EEC intends to ask the 96nation GATT to declare the US retaliatory duties in violation of the international body's rules.

A delay would help defuse tensions surrounding the conflict, touched off by the common market decision to ban for health reasons meat from animals treated with growth hormones. US officials argue the use of certain hormones to fatten animals, a common practice among American farmers, does not pose a health risk.

whether the community has the right to impose such a ban to protect the health of its consumers. But there was some indication the EEC was easing its stand. Frans Andriessen, the EEC's top trading official, told the European Parliament, the community's legislative body, last week that scientific factors could be considered. "One doesn't need to exclude the scientific judgement in the total framework of this problem," he said.

Nico Wegter, spokesman for Andriessen, denied the remarks marked a change, but others viewed the comments as a weakening of the European position.

The meat ban originally was set to go into effect on Jan 1, 1989, but the trading bloc agreed to a one-year delay. It refused additional US appeals for a postponement.

The prohibition was expected to block the importation of about $100 million worth of beef and beef byproducts from the United States.

In retaliation, the United States imposed 100 per cent duties on boneless beef, pork hams and shoulders and a variety of other Europeans products. The sanctions were worth about $100 million.

Both sides agreed to allow a grace period until the end of January for sanctioned products to enter their borders.

BAGHDAD, Jan 23, (AP): Venezuelan President-elect Carlos Andres Perez said on Thursday the Gulf countries were determined to defend oil prices and keep stability in the market.

Perez told reporters at the end of a 24-hour visit to Baghdad that he found President Saddam Hussein and other Iraqi officials "in full agreement" with his views on "oil and OPEC issues."

Perezarrived in Baghdad from Tehran on a swing through the Gulf oil-producing nations aimed at boost solidarity within the 13-member Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries. "I am more optimistic now than when I left Venezuela that the OPEC countries are more united to maintain stability of oil prices," he said.

Perez said he believes that non-

OPEC oil-producers are now ready to join organisation member-nations in defending oil prices and maintaining stability in the market. "Now all of us, OPEC and non-OPEC producers, are willing to defend prices that are satisfactory to producers and not excessive to consumers," he said. Perez added that he considers current oil prices are "satisfac-

Crude oil prices surged past the $19 a barrel mark on Wednesday to reach a 14-month high. Analysts said the rally was based on confidence that OPEC will abide by its pact to cut production from Jan 1.

The organisation agreed last November to slash daily output to 18.5 million barrels a day to prop up sagging prices. Prices have risen streadily over the past two weeks amid signs that OPEC members are sticking to the Perez said that Gulf leaders were agreed on holding an OPEC has been set for the meeting.

tory" for both producers and Saudis take new step in restructuring oil industry

ABU DHABI, Jan 23, (Reuter): Saudi Arabia has taken a new step in restructuring its oil industry by establishing a local refining and marketing company, but the organisation's details are still vague, oil industry sources in the Oil Minister Hisham Nazer announced the establishment of the Saudi Arabian Refining and Company Marketing Company (SAMARC) last week to take over all refinery and marketing activities from state agency

Oil industry sources said Petromin will remain as a holding company to oversee oil and mineral operations.

Operational The announcement (on SAMARC) has been made, but it will take a while for the company to be operational," an oil analyst in the Gulf said. "The details are still lacking." Gulf oil sources said the new company might start functioning early this summer.

Saudi Arabia is the world's biggest oil exporter with an OPEC production quota of 4.524 million barrels per day. After a price crash in 1986 it set out to cut costs an integrate operations from the oil fields to petrol stations in consumer states. In November, it established

the Saudi Arabian Oil Company

to take over the management of its oil fields from Arabian

American Oil Company (ARAMCO) and set up a joint venture with Texaco to refine and sell oil products in 23 American states.

Gulf-based oil traders said the new company could be based in Jeddah, rather than in Riyadh, where the General Petroleum and Mineral Organisation of Saudi Arabia (Petromin) is located. Sources said Petromin will relinquish all domestic refineries and its share in two joint venture refineries in Jeddah and Jubail to SAMARC, which will also take over local and international trading of refined products.

Oil discovery

LIMA, Peru, Jan 23, (AP): Peruvian President Alan Garcia has confirmed a major oil discovery in his country's jungles.

The oil deposits, estimated at 600 million barrels, were dis-covered by Occidental Petroleum in a jungle region called La Collpa in Ucayali, 355 miles (575 kilometres) northeast of Lima, Garcia said at a news conference on Friday, according to the official gazette El Peruano. Occidental began its exploration in the region two months ago, Garcia was quoted as saying. He did not say when Occidental will begin to pump

We are upset by the American Express application, says banker Banking proposal outrages Canadian financial industry

OTTAWA, Jan 23, (UPI): With the approval of the conservative government, the world's largest financial services empire is attempting to slip quietly in the back door of the Canadian banking establishment. American Express Travel Related Services Inc. of New York has applied for a banking licence to do business in Canada by as early as April. The licence would allow American Express Bank Canada to operate like any other domestic or foreign bank, taking consumer deposits and

making loans. Outraged

Canadian bankers, however, contend that American Express, because of its wide array of financial services, could gain an advantage in the Canadian

The move by American Express has outraged Canada's domestic banks, which operate under rules that prohibit commercial ownership of financial institutions. "As an industry we are very upset by the American Express application," a Canadian banker

Executives of Canada's chartered banks contend American Express is a commercial company that runs a worldwide credit operations, sells traveller's checks, travel services, leases automobiles and offers special merchandise for sale to card

ness in the Canadian financial industry. If American Express is successful in its quest for a bank licence, it would mark the first time the Canadian government has granted a licence to the subsidiary of a parent company that is not a fully regulated bank in its own members and as such has no busi-

Bankers and financial industry analysts said the granting of a bank licence appears to smack of political favouritism by the conservative government that will give the American conglomerate an unfair advantage in the tightly regulated Canadian market.

For the last century, the Canadian government has been saying it wants to separate commercial from financial operations. Here we have American Express in a commercial business being allowed to set up a chartered bank," said a Toronto-based banking analyst who spoke on condition of anonymity.

According to the analyst, American Express is being granted a licence as a political favour.

He said the company's US chairman, James D. Robinson III. a personal friend of Canadian

headed up a prestigious business group in the United States to lobby support for the US-Canada free trade agreement.
"The two generals got together and agreed to rub each other's backs. It looks suspiciously like a deal was done," the analyst said. American Express executives have denied that any deals were struck to gain approval of the company's application for a foreign banking licence.

Application

American Express first considered setting up a bank in Can-ada two-and-a-half years ago, about the time Canada and the United States launched the free trade negotiations.

The reason American Express went to the trouble of setting up the numbered company, financial analysts suggested, was to deflect public attention from its proposal to establish a bank. Even opposition politicians said they were unaware American Express had filed an application for a bank licence. The application is now being considered by the superintendent of financial institutions which oversees the banking industry and must be approved a second time by the conservative However, approval of the licence may be delayed since at least one organisation, the Canadian Bankers Association which represents all domestic and foreign banks, is considering requesting public hearings be held to investigate the application. Andre Brossard, director of the rulings for the superintendent of financial institutions, said in an interview that many objections have been raised over the bank application.

"It was a curious thing, very large, very smooth, and rounded like a dome. While I stood wondering what it could be, all around grew dark. It was late in the day, and the sun would set in a little while, but the sky seemed to be hidden all at once by a thick cloud.

"To my surprise this was not so, but the cloud was really a huge bird, bigger than I had ever dreamed a bird could be. I thought it must be the wonderful roc of which I had heard the sailors talk, and the great white dome must be its egg.

"Thinking it likely the bird was coming to sit on her egg, I crept under it, and, as soon as she was settled, tied myself firmly to one of her big, strong legs. "Thus I lay until the morning, when the bird, rising high, carried me so swiftly through the air that I became dizzy, and lost my senses. On coming to myself some time later I was lying on the ground, but still tied to the leg of the huge bird. "Not wishing to go through such a terrible journey again, I made haste to get free from the bird's leg, and it was well I did so. for almost the next moment she seized a huge snake in her bill and flew away.

"I could not tell where she had carried me. All around were mountains so high that they seemed to touch the sky, and so steep that no one could climb them. I was no better off here than on the island. Suddenly I forgot my trouble for a time, for. looking at the ground, I found it was covered with diamonds, big shining diamonds. "But, alas, there were other things besides, things that filled my heart with fear, and made me wish more than ever to find some way out of the lonely valley. These were snakes, so large that they could swallow an elephant quite casily.

"As the day grew brighter, however, they hid away in their homes, for fear, I suppose, of the roc, but when the night drew near they came out again in large numbers. Feeling it would be dreadful to spend the dark night in terror in case I should be swallowed by one of the great creatures, I looked about for some place in which to take shelter till the day dawned.

"At length I found a cave, the entrance to which was so small that I could block it with a large stone. Though now feeling safer I could still not sleep; the hissing of the snakes outside was too frightening.

"As soon as it was light I left the cave, and walked a short distance through the valley, feeling far too miserable to touch the diamonds under my feet. The food I had brought from the ship kept me from starving, but I was so weary that at last I felt obliged to lie down and sleep.

Hardly had I begun to doze, however, when I was startled by something heavy falling near me. Opening my eyes quickly I saw a large piece of raw meat lying at my feet. Another piece fell, and another, and several more, and as they fell heavily upon the diamonds, the lovely stones stuck firmly into the meat.

"This made me think again of the sailors' stories. and I knew that the meat was being thrown into the valley by men on the mountains, in the hope that it would be fetched back by the eagles to feed their young ones, when the diamonds could be taken from their nests.

"Now I thought I could see a way of escape by tying a piece of meat firmly to my back, and waiting till an eagle carried me up out of the dreadful valley. This I did, but not until I had first filled my bag with the precious stones.

"I had not long to wait. One of a number of eagles picking me up bore me to his nest on the top of the mountains, where I was found by a merchant who had frightened the eagle away. At first he looked at me in surprise, and then said I had no right to steal his diamonds. 'If you will listen to me, I said gently 'you will find I am no thief, though having enough diamonds to make both myself and you rich for life. I got them from the valley, and chose the very best to be found." "The other merchants now crowded round, and all showed great surprise at my story. They wondered much at the trick I had played, but they wondered still more when I showed them the stones.

"Though I begged him to take several, the merchant who had found me would take only the smallest of them, which he said was a good fortune in itself. They agreed to let me spend that night in their camp, which I did, and was then taken to the merchant's house, where I told my strange story again to his wife and children.

"In the course of time I once more reached my home, and settled down to a life of case, and made glad the hearts of my poor neighbours, by sharing my riches with them.'

This being the end of Sindbad's second story, he gave Hindbad another purse of money, and asked him to return the next day.

Young Brothers beat Millat

YOUNG Brothers Cricket Club scored a convincing four-wicket victory over Millat Cricket Club in the 'Usman Trophy' played at the Sharq grounds on Friday.

MCC won the toss and opted to bat first. Openers Raza and Hameed started confidently scoring 22 runs before Raza was bowled by Omar Baig for 4. Hameed thereafter took control and was batting well when he too was bowled by Qutbuddin for 38. After that wickets kept falling at regular intervals and MCC ended with 143 runs to their credit in their allotted 22 overs. For YBCC, the successful bowlers were Afzal, Donald, and Qutbuddin with 2 wickets to their credit while Omar and Amjad got one each.

YBCC openers Mirza and Zagar responded well with an opening partnership of 77 runs before Mirza was caught off Raza for 27. Next to go was Zagar with a timely 46. Amjad with a splendid knock of 67 saw YBCC safely reach their victory target of 144 in the 19th over. Hameed with two, Jawad and Raja with one each were the successful bowlers for Millat.

Victoria crush New South Wales

SYDNEY, Jan 23, (Reuter): Test pace bowler Merv Hughes con-tinued his successful season by capturing six for 36 as Victoria crushed New South Wales by 200 runs in the Sheffield Shield cricket championship today.

Hughes, who in the second test against West Indies last month took a match haul of 13 wickets that included only the second broken hat-trick in test history, helped to dismiss New South Wales for 191 on the fourth and final day in Melbourne. New South Wales, needing 392 to win, resumed at four for one and were propped up by nightwatchman Phil Emery (83). But when he went with the total 175, the last five wickets fell for 16 runs in 40 minutes.

In Perth, stubborn resistance by ex-test batsman Dirk Wellham and Richard Soule enabled Tasmania to force a draw on the final day against champions Western Australia.

Tasmania, needing 349 to win, were 160 for seven when their captain Wellham, who demoted himself to number eight, and Soule resisted for 86 minutes, guiding the side to 200 for seven at the close.

Australia name three spinners in Test squad

SYDNEY, Jan 23, (Reuter): Australia, banking on a turning wicket, named three spinners for the team to take on West Indies in the fourth Test starting here on graveyard for West Indies teams in previous summers.

The last time the two sides locked horns in 1984-85, Australia won by an innings and 55 runs, thanks to 38-year-old legspinner Bob Holland who took 10 wickets in the match.

Australian selectors are hoping to repeat the feat over the weekend and restore some pride to the country's sagging reputation, this time through 35-yearold Trevor Hohns.

Hohns is the longest-serving player in local first-class cricket and would be the fifth oldest Australian since World War

Two to make a Test debut. He joins off-spinners Peter Taylor and Tim May.

Hohns would also be the second "rebel" to have played in South Africa, following paceman Terry Alderman, to join the Australian side after serving a three-year ban.

Mark Taylor of New South Wales, the most consistent opener in Sheffield Shield cricket this season, was also introduced to the team, beefing up the Australian top-order batting to counter the West Indies feared pace attack.

Taylor. Tim May, Merv Hughes. High court overturns summons on

South Africa

LONDON, Jan 23, (Reuter): Legal moves to stop a Test ban on cricketers with South African links on the grounds it would amount to blackmail were quashed today.

The high court overturned a criminal summons issued to the civil liberties organisation the Freedom Association by a magistrate yesterday alleging that plans by cricket's world governing body to impose a Test ban was blackmail.

The International Cricket Conference (ICC) were meeting at Lord's today and tomorrow to debate four resolutions — one seeks a life ban and one a fouryear suspension - on the vexed issue of layers working in the racially divided republic.

Lord Justice Taylor, sitting in London with Justice McNeill, said the application for the summons was "an abuse of the process of the court" and was 'launched solely as a device to disrupt or embarrass the International Cricket Conference."

The summons, said the judge, was a "criminal sledgehammer to deal with a problem which is entirely civil."

The court allowed the ICC's application to have the summons set aside

Norris McWhirter, head of the Freedom Association, said the setback would not stop an application by the association later today for a high court injunction to stop the ICC acting on its resolutions.

The association claims the ICC's attempt to restrict cricketers' rights to pursue their professional careers is an unlawful restraint of trade.

MIAMI, Jan 23, (Reuter); Joe Montana threw a 10-yard touchdown strike to John Taylor with just 34 seconds left to lift the San Francisco 49ers to a 20-16 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals in the 23rd Super Bowl today.

"We put it together in the final drive. So much credit goes to our team to have the poise to hang in there," said 49er coach Bill Walsh after winning his third championship of the decade. Only Pittsburgh Steelers' coach Chuck Noll has won more Super Bowls with four.

Krumrie, the heart of the Bengals defence, refused to be taken to hospital despite the severity of his injury and insisted on watching the game on television from the locker room. But doctors insisted after a while and they sent him to hospital.

San Francisco opened the scoring with just over three minutes left in the first quarter when Mike Cofer capped a stalled, 13play 49er drive by kicking a 41-yard field goal for a 3-0 lead.

Early in the second quarter the 49ers moved to the 10 yard line, but the Bengals defensive unit dug down and kept San Francisco from putting the ball in the end zone. Their frustration was then compounded when a bad snap from centre Randy Cross caused Cofer to miss an easy 19-

yard field goal attempt. Magnificent

The Bengals put their first points on the scoreboard with just one minute 15 seconds left in the first half when kicker Jim Breech connected with the first of his three field goals - a 34-yarder that ended the first half scor-

Czeshkovsky resigned at his 41st, when he was on the verge of being mated.

(Reuter): Miloslav Mecir continued his stealthy progress towards the Australian Open men's tennis final today after Boris Becker's fourth-round defeat cleared yet another seeded player from the Olympic champion's path.
The ninth-seeded Czechoslovak beat South Africa's Christo van Rensburg 6-46-16-0 to reach a quarterfinal against qualifier Goran Ivanisevic, a 17year-old Yugoslav with a fiery forehand and a temper to match. Mecir and Jonas Svensson, the 7-6 6-4 6-3 conqueror of Becker, are the only seeds left in the top section of the draw after world number one Mats Wilander, Yannick Noah, Mikael Pernfors and Henri Leconte all met untimely defeats.

Knocked

"I'm not complaining about everyone being knocked out — I can't do anything about," said Mecir, beaten finalist at the 1986 US Open.

Svensson, a French Open semifinalist last year, next plays compatriot Jan Gunnarsson who beat eighth-seeded Leconte in the first round on the way to his first Grand Slam quarterfinal.

The 14th-seeded Svensson's all-round game proved too much for Becker whose serve never looked the weapon which won him two Wimbledon titles. The West German served just six aces, was unsuccessful with over 50 per cent of his first serves and made twice as many unforced errors as the Swede.

Svensson named in Swedish Cup team

STOCKHOLM, Jan (Reuter): Jonas Svensson, destroyer of third seed Boris Becker in the Australian Open today. was named in Sweden's Davis Cup squad for their opening world group tie against Italy next month.

Missing from the line-up was world number one Mats Wilander who had said he was contemplating a complete break from the game after his shock secondround defeat by India's Ramesh Krishnan here.

"Mats wants to rest and think things over. I don't want to pressure him and he didn't play well here," non-playing captain Jonte Sjogren, who is also Wilander's personal coach, told Swedish reporters in Melbourne.

Instead of playing the Davis Cup, Wilander has embarked on a 2,500-km trip with wife Sonya to Ayers Rock in the Australian outback in an attempt to recharge his batteries and rid himself of persistent shin splint problems.

Supreme
Sjogren said the squad for the tie on February 3-5 would be completed by Wimbledon champion Stefan Edberg, doubles specialist Anders Jarryd, and Mikael Pernfors. Sweden, dethroned as Cup holders by West Germany last December, will play Italy on a fast indoor surface in the southern Swedish town of Malmo. Svensson, who beat Becker in straight sets, was expected to play well on the supreme court surface in Malmo, Sjogren said.

Jan Gunnarsson, who meets Svensson in the Australian Open quarterfinals, was nominated as reserve under a new Davis Cup rule which permits one team change up to an hour before the Gunnarsson may be needed. Edberg has said he would prefer not to play in the tie because of a tough schedule and Pernfors hurt his neck when he was eliminated from the Open here.

The tie against Italy will be Sjogren's first as non-playing captain. Earlier this month he replaced the successful Hasse Olsson who led Sweden to six consecutive finals between 1983-

Spragget takes lead in chess quarterfinal

QUEBEC CITY, Jan 23, (AP): Canadian grandmaster Kevin Spraggett scored a 54-move victory over Artur Yusupov of the Soviet Union in the second game of their World Chess Championship candidates quarterfinal yes-

Spraggett took a 1.5-0.5 lead with the victory. When play ended, the 34-year-old Montreal resident res tion, punctuated by loud cheer-ing, from the 250 spectators at Quebec's Jacques Cartier Hall.

Spraggett, playing white, refuted a dangerous attack on his king in the middle game to emerge with an advantage in pieces. Yusupov resigned when an elegant combination from the Canadian trapped the Soviet player's queen. Widely considered an underdog by experts before the contest began, Spraggett now requires only draws from the remaining four games to reach the semifinal stage. A win scores one point and

Chances

"I don't want to get too excited about all this," said Dave Ross, a chess master from Vancouver who acis as Spraggett's chief second. "But if Kevin can draw the next game he must have very good chances."

In that game, scheduled for tomorrow Spraggett will play with the disadvantage of the black pieces. It will be one of Yusupov's two remaining chan-ces to go on the attack with white. The winner of the candidates.

a series of knockout matches, will challenge world champion Garry Kasparov in a 10-week title contest scheduled for 1990.

British grandmaster Jonathan Speelman, who defeated fellow countryman Nigel Short last August, is the only player so far to make the semifinals, which will be staged this October in

The third quarterfinal, between former world champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union and Johann Hjartartson of Iceland, is scheduled to begin on Jan 28 in Seattle, Washington.

When Yusupov neutralized Spraggett's early edge many experts predicted the game would end in a draw.

IAAF to propose new doping control rules submitted for final approval LONDON, Jan 23, (UPI): at the IAAF congress at Bar-

The fight against doping, highlighted by the dis-qualification of Canadian world 100 metres champion Ben Johnson at the Seoul Olympics, will be high on the agenda when the 23-strong council of the International Amateur Athletics Federation (IAAF) meets in Singapore Friday through Sunday.

The council is to rule on proposed new IAAF doping control regulations, particularly concerning the testing of athletes at non-IAAF competitions, such as the Pan-American Games and Commonwealth Games and random testing outside of competition, which has not so far been specifically covered by IAAF rules. IAAF members are being urged to organise testing programmes outside of competition this year which will require rule changes.

In addition, the IAAF plans to conduct random tests at events other than its own competitions. Any new regulations approved in principle in Singpaore will come into effect as soon as possible, although they will have to be
